1. During the first three weeks of September 1954, several six-engined (sic) propeller-driven aircraft were observed flying over Arkhangelsk. They had swept-back wings and a thick fuselage. One such airplane flying north passed over the city approximately twice a day. [redacted] 25X1 the aircraft originated from an airfield southeast of Arkhangelsk. [redacted]

2. Every day, two-engined and four-engined aircraft passed over Arkhangelsk in small groups. They flew in the direction of Murmansk, and returned after several hours. 25X1

3. Jet aircraft in groups of from five to ten were often seen at high altitudes over the city.
