

(94)

These are all stated in an offensive aspect, but every one has a defensive aspect which is of equal or greater importance to the national security.

1) Eliciting of Information by interrogation or otherwise

- a) Witting - Conditions varying with amount of control

freedom to use duress

- b) Unwitting - (Usually under conditions of no control)

Conditions can vary from the Pretext Interview to Administration of drugs unknown to subject.

2) Detection of the Bona Fides or Basic Veracity of the Individual.
(A problem with all persons that we may wish to use.)

- a) Potential Agents

- b) Defectors

- c) Refugees

- d) POW

- e) Others

3) Inducing a person to perform acts (short or long term) which he normally could not be expected to perform. (Assertion of control over and above that of normal social relationships.)

This will take the following forms:

- a) Subverting from principles - This may vary from Rationalizing a disloyal act
Construction of a new person

- b) The performance of long range acts unaccompanied by the presence of a controlling officer - (Mights could be drugs, hypnosis or any combination?)

- c) The performance of a certain behavior pattern unaccompanied by the presence of a controlling officer.

- d) The establishment of dormant controls in an individual which can be reawakened
(Are there effective timely post-hypnotic control methods?)

- e) Insulate the individual from his surroundings or condition him so that he can withstand pressures which he normally would not be expected to withstand.

- f) Blot out his knowledge of past acts.

In addition, Soviet agents occurs in one of more of these areas, it is felt that it is related that