9 July 1970, Opening of Youth Assembly, first leaflet "To the delegates and guest of the Youth Assembly" signed by Ukrainian students in New York was placed on table along with other official and semi-official literature of Assembly. This initial leaflet was picked up by delegates until the of the Soviet delegates read the leaflet and became extremely upset. He went to the security guard and demanded that the leaflet be removed from the table, however the security guard did not remove the leaflet, stating that there was nothing wrong with it. One of the Ukrainian students standing nearby was asked by the Soviet delegate if he had anything to do with this leaflet, he replied no, but was asked to leave by the security guard anyway since he was not a delegate.

13 July; The Albanian delegate gave a strong speech attacking the Soviet Union for imperialism and revisionism, mentioning the invasion of CSSR, and at the end of his speech started to mention the leaflet put out by Ukrainian students in N.Y. but since his speech was limited to 10 minutes he could not finish. That morning, a second leaflet, in the form of a Soviet Press Release was left on the table with official literature, but after 3 hours was missing with no knowledge of what happened to it. During the evening of the 13th, this same "Press Release" was left in the residence halls where the youth delegates lived.

14 July; Soviet delegation protested to the steering committee about first leaflet, saying that it was illegal to leave it there on the table. The reply was that any literature may be left on the table. Soviets then brought up the point that the leaflet had the official symbol of the U.N. on it, and therefore was a deception. To this the steering committee replied that the Soviets were right, but that their protest was too late.
