Dean,

Hi. I hope this note finds you well.

I'm the reporter here at the Times that's been following the Robert Levinson saga.

I am writing because I recently reached an agreement with Farrar, Straus & Giroux to write a book about it.

As you know, I am not a national security reporter (actually, I usually cover drugs, medical devices, etc.)

That said, I was hoping to make a visit to the CIA soon so I can describe the building, setting with some accuracy.

I'd also like to get a generic understanding of some procedural issues that I'll have to address in the book.

Would this be possible?

Thanks for the consideration.

Regards,

Barry Meier
