O MARTIN BORMANN
201-005897

The "Buenos Aires Herald", English language newspaper published at Buenos Aires, Argentina, in its edition of October 17, 1966, contained the following United Press article date lined at Bonn (Germany) bearing upon Bormann's possible whereabouts. The article which is entitled, "Eichmann Kidnapping Israeli's 'Last Case'" reads as follows:

"Bormann Traced to Safe Haven in Argentina.

"Simon Wiesenthal, head of a Jewish group with headquarters in Vienna who led the successful search of Adolf Eichmann said yesterday he had definite proof that Martin Bormann, Hitler's right-hand man is in Argentina, but that it was unlikely he would ever be tried.

"Wiesenthal said he had transferred millions of marks from Swiss banks to his hideout in the Argentine jungle area on the borders of Brazil and Paraguay.

"He added that there was little chance of getting Bormann out of Latin America as the countries concerned uphold asylum rights.

"Wiesenthal also stated that Israel had apparently decided that the Eichmann case would be the last Nazi to be sought out. Eichmann was kidnapped from his hideout in Argentina with Wiesenthal's aid and brought to Israel where he was later executed for his crimes against the Jews in the Third Reich's concentration camp.

"Wiesenthal said he possessed a photograph taken in Argentina of a man with a striking resemblance to Bormann."
