The brother colonel scoffed at the reactionary information media in Tunisia and Egypt. He said that the mercenary information media have been saying things which are very far from the truth. He said: They live in one age and we live in another. They live in the age of police rule and dictatorial governments, while we live in an age of the masses and the rule of the masses, who freely express their will.

The trustee of Arab nationalism added: The Egyptian and Tunisian governments, by attacking the 1 September revolution and its command, are doing themselves a big disservice. In this connection, Al-Qadhdhafi said: The more they talk against us, the more the masses will cling to the revolution, become vigilant and defy them.

He added: I consider this march the best reply to the enemies of the revolution, be they the Americans, the Tunisian and Egyptian Governments, or their lackeys. This popular march silences the Voice of America which used to be the voice of the Arabs, as well as the Middle East Radio and the radio of the Tunisian Government which has lost its reason. This march clots the blood in their veins, that is if they have any blood in their veins. The march of the masses of Misrata is the best reply to the enemies of the revolution, the enemies of the masses and unity.

It is futile to take a hostile stand toward the resolution. Those who try to challenge the revolution are playing with fire and are dancing at the brink of an abyss into which they will fall.

In conclusion, the trustee of Arab nationalism affirmed to the masses: Together with you, your revolution will continue to march forward and strongly defy the enemies. The Libyan Arab people will be the vanguard of the Arab nation. The traitors, the reactionaries and the imperialists will see what end will befall them.

[Excerpt] Before leaving [the Algeria-Libya-Niger summit], Colonel al-Qadhdhafi spoke to national and international journalists in reply to a question about the imperialist attack on the region. He said: "It is in the nature of reactionary regimes to ally themselves with imperialism. The Arab region witnessed imperialist attacks in the past, but patriotic and unionist forces frustrated them and thus proved their ability to do so because they represented the interests of the masses."

He added: "I believe the current attempts by the reactionaries are hopeless and the time has passed when imperialism can achieve its objectives in this region, because the people are too vigilant. For our part, we in the Libyan Arab Republic have declared our attitude regarding the settlement of accounts with internal and external reactionaries. We regard forces hostile to the patriotic front, whether inside or outside the Arab homeland, as standing in the same rank as imperialism.

In reply to a question on the importance of this meeting and its effect on the development of Arab-African relations, President al-Qadhafi said: "As an effective force in this region we should turn our attention to our friends and neighbors. We have a duty toward such countries as Niger and Chad. We are capable of broadening the circle of cooperation to embrace all the peoples of Africa. This meeting has taken place within this framework."

Replying to a question from the LE MONDE correspondent about Libyan recognition of the Saharan Democratic Arab Republic, Colonel al-Qadhafi said: "As far as Libya is concerned, our attitude toward this question is clear. We had the honor of having been among the first to support the liberation war in the Sahara against occupation. Our attitude at present toward revolutionary peoples need no further underlining."
