Dispute over diplomat's slaying

U.S. recalls envoy to protest Chile's stance in probe

By GRAHAM HOVEY

WASHINGTON — The United States recalled its ambassador to Chile yesterday to protest that country's alleged failure to cooperate in the investigation of the 1973 assassination of a former Chilean diplomat in Washington.

"Chilean authorities have not been forthcoming on important requests by the Justice Department which have been pending for some time," said John H. Trotter, a State Department spokesman, in explaining the recall of Ambassador George W. Landau "for consultations."

The requests involve the fatal bombing Sept. 21, 1976, of an automobile carrying Orlando Letelier and his associate, Ronni K. Moffitt. Letelier was a former Chilean ambassador to the United States and minister in cabinet of the late President Salvador Allende.

An American expatriate, Michael Vernon Townley, and three Cuban exiles have been charged with conspiracy in connection with the deaths.

U. S. investigators have said privately that they expect shortly to obtain federal grand jury indictments against three Chilean army officers suspected of plotting the assassination of Letelier, who was an outspoken critic of the military government.

Sources close to the investigation have identified one of the officers as Gen. Manuel Contreras Sepulveda, the retired head of Chile's secret police and a confidant of President Augusto Pinochet.

Neither the State Department nor the Justice Department would disclose the requests that Chile had not responded to, but administration officials have anticipated difficulty in obtaining the extradition of Contreras and the other officers in the event they were indicted.

"We are not asking for the extradition of three people," a State Department official said yesterday. "You don't ask for extradition until people are indicted."

He said it could be assumed that the requests were "for information and cooperation short of extradition."

An official at the Justice Department said that the recall of Landau was meant to signal Chile that "we're serious about our request for certain things of the Chilean government can provide but refuses to do so."

The Justice Department also feared that Chile would refuse to turn over Contreras and his two officer colleagues for trial in the United States.

If the Chilean government refuses extradition when the time comes, the official said, the Justice Department at least wants to be "very insistent that these people will be tried seriously in the Chilean courts."

He said that the indictments in the United States will name the people in the Chilean secret police who were responsible for the death of Letelier.

The indictments also will make public the evidence of "how things started in Chile" that led to the assassination in Washington, he said.

The Chilean secret police were charged by international agencies with political murders, torture and disappearances of opponents of the military regime after the overthrow of Allende's government in September 1973.

Chile's foreign minister, attending the General Assembly of the Organization of American States in Washington, said his government was not surprised by Landau's recall.

"We think it would be useful that he convey to his government what we have told him in Chile," said the minister, Hernan Cubillos. He added that Chile was cooperating with U.S. authorities in the Letelier investigation but said Washington was not providing enough information to support its requests.

In addition to announcing the ambassador's recall, Trotter also told a State Department briefing that the government intended to hold up the loading of fins for bombs, which had been ordered

Col. Harlan Sanders greets jockey Steve Cautchen during dinner on rural estate near Owensboro.

Youths' tough questions dim near swirl of stars

By BILL OSINSKI

Courier-Journal Staff Writer

OWENSBORO, Ky. — Fancier fingers have never been licked clean of the Colonel's fried chicken.

The stars came out early yesterday evening under a tent set up on a rural estate west of Owensboro. Celebrities including jockey Steve Cautchen, singer Debby Boone, actor Edward Asner, and actress Cloris Leachman — not to mention hundreds of the nation's most honored youths and scores of adult super-achievers — dined on chicken prepared under the auspices of none other than Col. Harlan Sanders.

The Colonel came out of retirement to preside over the fixings for the gala evening that ended the first full day of the 17th annual "Salute to Excellence" weekend being held in Owensboro.

The event attracted distinguished leaders from the fields of science, business, law, and entertainment to be honored themselves and to mix with the young people.

But when the group came together under the tent, it was the entertainment stars that shone the brightest. Young people who had been locked in brisk, high-level discussions earlier in the day became typically eager autograph hounds when the big names came out.

Cautchen's arrival easily got the biggest response from the nearly 1,500 people gathered in the back yard of the Tom Green estate. The wonder jockey was quickly surrounded by a group of girls his age squealing for his signature. "I feel like I'm lost," Cautchen said, shrugging off the trappings of celebrity about as easily as one of his many stakes-race wins.

Cautchen came to Owensboro barely long enough to receive his Golden Plate Award from the American Academy of Achievement, the sponsoring group for the weekend. He had flown in after riding in one race and was to leave soon after the dinner for another.

Miss Boone was also making a quick stop for her award and leaving shortly afterward.

Asner, however, came with his family and will remain to take part in the grand finale tonight.

As he broke through a cluster of autograph seekers, Asner said he considers the academy recognition "a bit of an honor." He received his Golden Plate last year and will participate in this year's presentation ceremonies.

Western Kentucky affected

I-57 bridge may help traffic, hurt tourism

By BILL POWELL

Courier-Journal Staff Writer

CAIRO, Ill. — Illinois and Missouri officials opened a $50 million bridge linking their two states yesterday, bringing both good news and bad news for far Western Kentucky.

The good news is that the bridge, part of Interstate 57, should ease traffic congestion on U.S. 51 in four Kentucky counties. The congestion has been caused by the funneling of motorists into Kentucky from Cairo, where I-57 had ended.

And the bridge will give Western Kentucky easy access to the now-completed interstate highway chain linking Chicago and New Orleans.

The bad news is that Kentucky tourist-oriented businesses on U.S. 51 may lose many of their customers, and the communities along the highway may lose their main attraction for improvements to U.S. 51.

"(U.S.) 51 will never again be what it was," Wickliffe, Ky., Mayor Tom Juett said yesterday. "Every governor I can remember has promised to four-lane it for us, and none ever did. I don't suppose it ever will be now, or that it even needs it."

Traffic started rolling yesterday on the new bridge at Cairo after a ceremony in which a hastily erected tent at the center of the bridge.

The bridge closes a gap in the interstate highway system.

Shark takes boat for 14-hour ride, then bolts

Associated Press

MONTAUK, N.Y. — The shark hunters who were aboard the charter boat Ebb Tide last night had a fish story to tell — about a half-day fight for a great white shark whose dimensions grew as the day wore on.

"You guessed it — it got away. "The fish won fair and square," Capt. John Sweetman of the Ebb Tide radioed to the Montauk Marine Basin last night. He said his 40-foot wooden boat was dragged for about 14 hours by the shark, frequently backwards.

During the long day, the fish had been described as being from 20 to 40 feet long and weighing from 2,000 to 3,000 pounds.

Sweetman said that his son, Jimmy, sunk a harpoon into "a very, very big white" at about 7 a.m.

The end came when the big fish, which had surfaced only twice during the fight, snapped a quarter-inch, 1,850-pound-test line attached to the harpoon.

The fish got away, Sweetman said, when the boat was 30 miles south of Montauk Point at the eastern tip of Long Island, about a dozen miles from where it was first sighted. The men on board were maneuvering the boat so the fish could be killed, the captain said.

Throughout the day, the only information about the battle came from the professional shark hunters aboard the boat.

Although there was no independent confirmation of the harpooning, there seemed to be no question that the boat had hooked something big. The crew said the fish pulled the Ebb Tide at speeds that ranged from one-half mph to 3 mph.

About 10 years ago a 17½-foot, 4,500-pound great white shark was landed off Montauk. Before being landed, that fish bit the boat.

Sightings of sharks are not unusual in the waters off eastern Long Island. Great white sharks, the subject of the films "Jaws" and "Jaws 2," may reach 40 feet in length and weigh several thousand pounds.

Carl Darenberg, operator of the marine basin, said there were two reports of shark sightings yesterday in the area — one by the Ebb Tide and the other of a smaller shark by another charter vessel, the Montauk.

Darenberg said the Montauk had chased the smaller shark for several hours before the fish disappeared.

Carter accuses unnamed groups of making Brzezinski a scapegoat

By TERENCE SMITH

Courier-Journal Staff Writer

FORT WORTH — President Carter accused unnamed "special interest groups" yesterday of making Zbigniew Brzezinski, his national security adviser, into the "scapegoat" of the administration's foreign policy.

Addressing some 6,000 people at a civic luncheon in the convention center at Fort Worth, Carter also said it was "not fair and certainly not right for the Soviet Union and Cuba to jump on Dr. Brzezinski when I am the one who shapes the policy after getting advice from him and others."

Carter did not identify the groups he had in mind. Later his aides said they were not sure to whom he was referring.

In recent months, Brzezinski's hard-line approach to Middle East policy and Soviet actions in Africa has been attacked by the pro-Israel lobby and by private groups seeking to encourage détente. White House officials said last night that it was fair to assume that these were the groups to which Carter had referred, but he stressed that he did not know for a fact that they were.

The audience, which had paid $7 each for the taco-and-roast-beef luncheon, responded with sustained applause when the president pledged that "we are not going to let the Soviet Union push us around."

The Fort Worth luncheon was the president's first stop on a two-day political trip to Texas that was to carry him to Houston, Beaumont and Fort Hood before he returns to Washington tomorrow night. In Houston, he addressed an audience of 1,300 people at a $1,000-per-couple fund-raiser for the Democratic National Committee.

Dappled days Red Brigade founder given 15-year sentence

Associated Press

TURIN, Italy — A court in Turin sentenced Red Brigade founder Renato Curcio and 28 others to up to 15 years in prison yesterday.

As the sentences were announced, Italian police prepared for revenge attacks by urban guerrillas who had tried several times to stop the trial.

The verdict ended the third attempt to try Curcio and other leaders of the Red Brigades. Their comrades on the outside had tried to break up the trial by kidnaping former Premier Aldo Moro and demanding freedom for Cur-cio and three other defendants in exchange for Moro's life.

When the government refused to bargain, Moro was slain.

During the three-month trial, the Red Brigades also claimed responsibility for killing 10 other people, including Moro's five bodyguards, and threatened violence against judges, lawyers, jurors and witnesses.

The heaviest sentences, 15 years, went to Curcio and Pietro Bassi. Three other Red Brigade ringleaders, Pietro Bertolazzi, Alberto Franceschini and

Korean official sought by U.S. resigns post

By CHARLES BABCOCK

WASHINGTON — The former South Korean ambassador who has become the center of a congressional bribery controversy resigned his government post yesterday, renewing hopes that he might eventually cooperate with investigators. Kim Dong Jo, a foreign policy adviser to South Korean President Park Chung Hee said he resigned because of the trouble his involvement in the case has caused his country.

Kim's resignation came a day after the House voted to cut $56 million in aid to Korea. The House cited the Seoul government's refusal to allow Kim to answer questions about payments he allegedly made to members of Congress while he was ambassador to Washington from 1967 to 1973.

However, Leon Jaworski, special counsel to the House Committee on Standards of Official Conduct, said that he was not as optimistic about Kim's action. "I can't throw my head up in the air and start cheering," he said. "I believe his testimony that would be so startling that his government has arrived at a decision that it would be just too bloody for him to come forward, so they have decided to totally stonewall it."

Jaworski seemed resigned in his comment to completing his investigation without information from Kim. "That would mean we only batted .500 on our key witnesses," he said. "We got Tong sur Park and we are Ambassador Kim resigning in competition. They were trying to outdo each other. So it does mean we'd have some loose ends."

Any move leading to Kim's cooperation in the investigation probably will not occur for a few weeks, sources said. Meanwhile, the House investigating committee ended a third day of private talks on possible disciplinary action against members who accepted money from Park. They are scheduled to recapture Tuesday.

Compromise approved on civil service firings

WASHINGTON — A House committee yesterday narrowly upheld a compromise amendment setting standards on firing federal workers. Many Democrats opposed the amendment to a civil service bill before the House Post Office and Civil Service Committee, and they promised greater proposals for the bill when it reaches the full House.

In trying to fire incompetent workers, the agency would have to show "substantial evidence" against the employee. To fire employees accused of misconduct, the agency would have to show a "preponderance of evidence" against them.

The compromise, approved 12-11, was supported by all but one Republican and a minority of Democrats on the committee. The compromise was intended to remove opposition to Carter's original proposal, which would have required the employee to show that a dismissal order was "arbitrary and capricious."

Turkey, Soviet Union sign accords

By DAN FISHER

MOSCOW — Turkish Prime Minister Bulent Ecevit signed a series of political, economic and cultural agreements with the Soviet Union yesterday, but said that military aid had neither been offered nor requested.

The Soviet Union has stepped up its diplomatic overtures to Turkey since the United States embargoed further arms sales to Ecevit's country in 1973. The arms embargo followed Turkey's 1974 invasion of Cyprus.

Ecevit had denied before his trip to Russia that the visit was aimed at putting pressure on the United States to lift its embargo, and he repeated the point in Moscow.

Asked how long he would wait before seeking military aid elsewhere, Ecevit replied: "Now there are no hopeful signs in congressional circles in the U.S. I don't think I should talk in terms of negative hypotheses."

President Carter said in a news conference last week that lifting the arms embargo against Turkey is "the most immediate and urgent foreign policy decision to be made by the current legislative session."

Observers said the political document signed by Ecevit and Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin apparently was worded to reassure Turkey's allies in the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The document stresses that it is "not directed against any state" and says the principles outlined "do not affect the rights or obligations of the U.S.S.R. and the Turkish Republic under any agreements."

The document also contains a non-aggression clause that was in the 1872 declaration of "good-neighborly relations" between the two countries. Asked if the clause is consistent with Turkey's NATO commitments, Ecevit replied: "Defense is something else from aggression. I don't think NATO has aggressive intentions."

During his talks with Kosygin and Soviet President Leonid I. Brezhnev, Ecevit said, "They refrained from offering any military supplies to Turkey in view of the fact we are members of different alliances and we made no such suggestion."

Perhaps the most significant of the Turkish-Soviet agreements covers oil. Beginning next year, Ecevit said, the Soviet Union will deliver 3 million tons of oil per year to Turkey — about one-fifth of its total requirement. Price has yet to be established, the prime minister said, but the countries have agreed that Turkey will pay for the oil with wheat and "certain metals."

Any oil that Turkey can't pay for in commodities will pay for in cash after three years, Ecevit said. The Kremlin also has agreed to help Turkey explore for oil on its own territory.

Ecevit said negotiators were unable to conclude an agreement regarding "a system of regulating the Black Sea." But he said that Turkish specialists will stay behind after he leaves to work on that. Such an agreement also could be important for oil exploration rights.

Ecevit left Moscow last night for a visit to Kiev before returning to Ankara.

High court allows U.S. judges to limit inmate punishment

By MORTON MINTZ
© L.A. Times-Washington Post Service

WASHINGTON — In a ruling that may lead to improved conditions or release for large numbers of prisoners, the Supreme Court ruled yesterday that extended confinement in punitive isolation cells may violate the constitutional ban on cruel and unusual punishment.

The ruling was the first in which the court has applied the Eighth Amendment to physical conditions in penal institutions.

The justices acted in a case from Arkansas, but the decision has major implications for many other states, most immediately Alabama, whose prison systems have been challenged in the federal courts.

The central part of a three-phase ruling concerned the power of a U.S. District Court judge to deal with the overall conditions of incarceration. The court ruled 8-1 that a judge may find a particular condition, such as punitive isolation, which is itself permissible, unconstitutional if it occurs in conditions that taken together are impermissible.

Some states say they can't afford to correct conditions that federal judges have found intolerable. That forces them to consider releasing large numbers of prisoners on parole or to work-release and halfway-house programs.

That happened in Alabama after Judge Frank M. Johnson issued an order in January 1976 to correct violations, such as overcrowding, violence, filthy and inadequate food, shelter, medical care and staff.

Unable to comply with some of the terms of the order, Alabama has released about 2,000 of 5,400 prisoners on parole to work-release programs and to halfway houses, said Alvin J. Bronstein, executive director of the National Prison Project of the American Civil Liberties Union.

In the second phase of yesterday's decision, the court, on a 7-2 vote, empowered a federal judge to force compliance with his orders to improve penal conditions by upholding the award of $20,000 in attorneys' fees that Arkansas prison officials must pay to the prisoners' counsel.

In the final part of the decision, the court upheld, 5-4, the award by the 8th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals of an extra $2,500 for the prisoners' lawyers.

The state must pay the fees even though it claimed immunity under the 11th Amendment and was not a defendant in the lawsuit, the court held.

A key issue in the Arkansas case was disciplining with punitive isolation: locking up four to 11 convicts in a windowless 8-by-10 foot cell with a water tap, a toilet flushable only from outside and no furniture. At night, mattresses that could spread infectious diseases were thrown on the floor. Meals provided fewer than 1,000 calories daily and consisted mainly of 'grue,' a baked paste made from various ingredients.

Chief federal judge J. Smith Henley tried repeatedly to get the state to improve conditions. But, after eight years of hearings and litigation, and after conditions had worsened, he ordered a specific cure. It included a 30-day limit on punitive isolation and payment of the attorneys' fees to prisoners' lawyers.

The duration of confinement "cannot be ignored" in deciding whether it "meets constitutional standards," Justice John Paul Stevens wrote for the court. "A filthy, overcrowded cell and a diet of gruel might be tolerable for a few days and intolerably cruel for weeks or months."

Justice William H. Rehnquist dissented.

In a separate decision, the court voted 8-0 to strike down a New Jersey law that prohibits other states from using New Jersey garbage dumps.

The ruling casts doubt on the validity of similar laws in nine other states, (Kentucky and Indiana are not among the nine.)

state court ruling to the U.S. Supreme Court.

Kucinich produced a black-and-orange bumper sticker at the news conference that said, "Support Kucinich, the people's mayor." He said he ordered them before his court setback Thursday.

Kucinich said the central issue of the recall campaign is whether "the people want to continue an anti-corruption, progressive administration in City Hall."

Democratic Councilman William T. Sullivan, a leader of the recall drive, said the campaign against the mayor "will present a true picture of what's going on rather than what comes from the mouth of the mayor."

"The issues will be incompetency, inability to govern and failure to act on financial problems, coupled with the style of the administration — its Gestapo tactics," Sullivan said.

The recall drive was triggered by Kucinich's dismissal March 24 of Police Chief Richard O. Hongisto, a former sheriff of San Francisco County.

Hongisto said he was fired for resisting what he characterized as pressure from the mayor's office. Hongisto claimed that he heard Kucinich say at a staff meeting that Sullivan must be punished for failing to vote as the mayor wished.

Kucinich later locked horns with the entire council, calling the members "a bunch of buffoons" and "lunatics."

Funding group for Reagan sued by FEC

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Federal Election Commission has filed suit against Ronald Reagan's 1978 presidential campaign committee, charging that it failed to file reports on about 40 percent of those who had contributed more than $100.

Under the law, treasurers of political committees for a candidate for federal office must report all contributions of more than $100 — with business address and occupation of the contributor. It is the latter information the commission wants from the Reagan campaign.

The complaint, filed in U.S. District Court on Thursday, said the commission had tried unsuccessfully to correct the violation "by informal methods of conference, conciliation and persuasion."

The commission asked the court to force the Reagan campaign committee and its treasurer to comply with the law and to fine them $5,000.

A spokesman for Reagan, a Republican, said the former California governor was traveling in Pennsylvania and was not immediately available for comment.

The commission has found that the presidential campaign organizations of California Gov. Jerry Brown, Sen. Frank Church and Sen. Henry M. Jackson failed to file such reports. All three are Democrats.

A commission spokesman said yesterday that the FEC was satisfied when those committees made the "best effort" to supply the information and that those cases didn't reach the lawsuit stage.

Cleveland mayor vows he'll beat recall vote

Associated Press

CLEVELAND — "Bring on the recall," said embattled Mayor Dennis J. Kucinich. "I'll take it on and I'll win. I'll reunite this city."

With that vow at a news conference yesterday, the 31-year-old maverick Democrat prepared to fight efforts to remove him from office by taking the issue to the people.

Moments before the news conference, City Clerk Mercedes Cotner set the stage for the recall by certifying that more than the required 37,532 valid signatures were on recall petitions.

The recall election is required in 40 to 60 days unless Kucinich, whose administration began last Nov. 14, resigns within the next five days. The mayor repeatedly has rejected that course.

When the five-day period ends, the city council must set an election date. A majority vote is needed to remove the mayor, who would be out of office upon certification of defeat. The council would select an interim mayor pending another election, Mrs. Cotner said.

Thursday the state Supreme Court upheld lower-court rulings that any registered Cleveland voter was eligible to sign recall petitions.

Kucinich had contended the petition process should be limited to those who voted for mayor last Nov. 8. But he said yesterday he had no plans to appeal the BONN, West Germany — A West German consortium pulled off a $20 million bidding coup this week, returning major German art treasures to the homeland of the Nazi-era Jewish fugitive who purchased them.

"We made a list of every item of major German historical interest, and we got them all — for 5 percent less than we planned to spend," said Rudi Walther, a member of the consortium. He had hoped draw up the plan for one of the biggest bidding operations in art history.

The art collection of leather magnate Robert von Hirsch, ranging from paintings of Old World masters to Gothic enamels, is being sold this week at Sotheby Parke Bernet's auction house in London.

Von Hirsch fled Nazi Germany in the 1930s for Basel, Switzerland. He died there last November at age 94.

He had bought some of the world's most valuable art works from collectors who were forced by pre-war political upheavals to sell their possessions.

A 5 1/2-inch enameled gilt medalion. The medalion was bought for $2.22 million for West Berlin's Kunstgewerbe Museum. Dating from about 1150, it is attributed to Belgian goldsmith Godefroid de Claire and depicts "Operation," the Angel of Charity.

A 1485 watercolor landscape by Albrecht Durer, which fetched $1.2 million. It went to the German National Museum in Nuremberg, Durer's hometown.

A Durer pen drawing depicting Christ on the Mount of Olives. It was purchased for $555,000 for the Kunsthalle in the central German industrial city of Karlsruhe.

An enameled, gilt-copper arm ornament believed to have formed part of German Emperor Frederick Barbarossa's coronation vestments in 1165. It cost $2.05 million.

Spain heads toward a 'federal union'

By RONALD KOVEN
of The Washington Post

MADRID — Many Spaniards profess to be unsurprised that the transition to democracy since the death of Generalissimo Francisco Franco in 1976 has been so smooth, but hardly anyone expected that the country would be on the verge of transforming itself peacefully from one of the world's most rigidly centralized states into something like a federal union.

As in France and England, the energies of Spanish kings were spent turning Spain from a collection of warring provinces and principalities into a centrally governed state.

Historically, centralization in Spain was identified not only with the idea of the modern nation-state, but also with the political right and its traditional institutions — the monarchy, the church and the army.

It is probably only the name of Franco's successor, King Juan Carlos, on the royal decrees granting provisional autonomy to Catalonia and the Basque country — whose separatism kept them in continual conflict with the Franco government — that has made it notorious.

The experiment in regionalism is also being looked upon with some distrust by the rest of Western Europe, where most countries are beset by troublesome regional movements.

French President Valéry Giscard d'Estaing, who came into power preaching decentralization, has just made it clear in a tour of Corsica, a separatist hotbed, that he has reversed himself and is not at all sure that regional government is such a good idea.

The French are also worried about separatism in Brittany and the potentially dangerous example the separatists might give to linguistic minorities on almost all of France's frontiers — the Flemish of Flanders, the Germans of Alsace, the Italians of Nice and Savoy, the Provençals and the inhabitants of France's own Basque country.

Hedonistic or fed up?

California tax vote reflected a mixture of impulses

The writer is a senior editorial writer for The Los Angeles Times.

By PHIL KERBY

Dear Sen. George McGovern,

I have long known that you can swing a neat phrase, but you really were in top form when you said that Californians who voted to cut property taxes responded to a "degrading hedonism that tells them to ask what they can take from the needy."

You don't know the half of it, senator. We have all sorts of strange hedonists in California. Here's an example for your next speech. He's a retired policeman. Last month (pre-June) his lavish one-bath, two-bedroom house was reappraised at 113 percent above its prior value. The taxes on his place would have gone up by $1,000. In typical hedonist cant, he said, "I simply don't know what I'm going to do. The house is only valuable to me if I sell it." For some odd reason, senator, he didn't want to leave the house where he had lived for 25 years.

Here is another equally apt illustration.

This fellow didn't like Proposition 13. He was worried about its effect on education. Then he visited the assessor's office (pre-June) and discovered that the value of his home, reappraised last year at $80,000, had been boosted to $104,000 this year. His current taxes, a little over $2,000, were scheduled to jump to $3,580 — about a $1,500 hike in just one year. He voted for 13.

That $1,500 increase alone, senator, would pay the full tax bill on a $80,000 home in your state of South Dakota, which I discovered, to my surprise, has no state income tax. Hedonism and South Dakota are evident contradictions in terms, so I wouldn't be prepared to say that South Dakotians keep their taxes so low to avoid their obligation to "the needy." You are in a better position to render a judgment on that, but I might point out that hedonist California, in addition to whopping property taxes, imposes an 11 percent state income tax.

In California, senator, we have had a marvellously efficient tax-collection system. Tax assessors were required to periodically update the valuation of property to reflect the latest market prices. As values increased, home taxes went up and up, and rivers of cash flowed to government agencies. In five years, property-tax collections jumped from $8.6 billion to $12 billion. Total personal and corporate income taxes rose during the same period from $2.8 to $5.4 billion.

Well, senator, the hedonists started to grumble, but the state's sensitive $40 billion-a-year bureaucracy swept aside their sniveling complaints. A year ago, a move was started to return one-fifth of a massive state surplus to homeowners, but you will be glad to know the effort failed.

Perhaps the Proposition 13 vote was totally selfish. I think more likely it was a vote based on a mixture of impulses, including reaction against the arrogance reflected in the attitude of a Los Angeles public official who was asked whether he would give up his official car to help the county government meet the emergency. "No way," he said. "I wouldn't want to use my own car even getting reimbursed for mileage. I don't want pigeon droppings on it and all the other wear and tear."

A page of background, interpretation and commentary

The English have recently seen that nationalism was waiting to be rekindled in Scotland, Wales, Cornwall and the Isle of Man, not to speak of Ulster. Belgium's unity is plagued by its periodically warring Flemish and Walloons.

The exact form of regional autonomy in Spain has not been spelled out and is the most controversial question facing drafters of the new constitution. Premier Adolfo Suarez is widely suspected of encouraging all of Spain's traditional regions to seek autonomy as a way of reducing the impact of giving it to Catalonia and Catalans, the only mainland autonomists with recognized languages of their own.

The transition from dictatorship to democracy has happened with breakneck speed, yet there seems to be fairly widespread disillusionment that democracy has not solved the country's problems overnight, least of all high inflation and unemployment. So the focus of hopes by the 30 million Spaniards who are unhappy with their lot has shifted from democratic central government to some vague expectation of salvation by the new regional autonomias that Suarez has offered.

Manuel Fraga Iribarne, a former Basque cabinet minister who describes himself as the leader of the "civilized right" in the provisional parliament, said in an interview, "In the United States, federalism was a way, as you Americans put it, to form a more perfect union. It makes no sense to divide a unitary state. What happens with the regions is our most serious problem, Suarez doesn't know what he wants. All he does is surrender continually to the demands of the Basques and Catalans."

Blas Tinarr, the leader of the small but vigorous Fascist Party, goes even further, speaking of "the surrender of Spain to autonomist governments which hope to become independent states." They are a vehicle, he said, for Marxist parties to take over the country. Even before a final text is ready, Tinarr's New Force Party is covering the country with graffiti reading, "No to the Constitution."

Even Fraga recognizes that there must be some regionalism, but he advocates that it be along the lines of the weak Italian regions that took 20 years to set up after they were first provided for in the Italian constitution. He said there could also be special arrangements for particular regions, like the ones for Sicily and Italy's German-speaking Trentino region.

Spain's Communists are being very prudent. Ramon Tamarit, one of the Communist constitutional negotiators in the small parliamentary committee working on the text said in an interview that the draft will be ambiguous and that the final form of regional autonomy will be left to detailed negotiations

Tamarit displayed vivid awareness of the anxiety over the issue in an army that fought under Franco to reduce Catalan and Basque bastions of republicanism. Rightists identify the two regions with republicanism and the left

When the Spanish Civil War broke out in 1936, Franco expected the heavily Catholic Basques to side with him. The special vengeance that Franco wreaked on the Basques when they did not is offered as an explanation for the refusal of ETA, the Basque independence movement, to lay down its arms even now that there is a government in Madrid ready to compromise.

Tamarit, the Communist, said he thought regionalism is far less of a threat to national unity now than under the republic.

"The integration of Spain is much stronger now than in the 1930s," he said. "Then, we had no electricity, television. There were not the same population flows between regions. We did not have a national market. Even the spread of the Spanish language has had a big boost in the past few years. Catalans is a bilingual country today. So is the Basque country."

In a country beset with major economic worries, the disadvantages as seen at the Finance Ministry of giving up tax revenues to the regions and of finding money to help them set up new administrative structures, seem to outweigh the advantages. Ministry officials also wonder what will happen to the bureaucracies in Spain's 50 administrative provinces.

There will probably be 13 mainland regions if Navarre accepts the Basque efforts to absorb it plus the Canaries off the Atlantic shores of Africa and the Balearic Islands in the Mediterranean.

Catalonia will take care of itself, said the Finance Ministry man. "The standard of living in Barcelona is comparable to Milan's," he said, likening Spain's northern industrial metropolis to Italy's. "But I'm not so sure about the other regions."

Says Tierno Galvan, Spain's leading constitutional-law professor, "We can't predict where all this autonomy is leading. Today, it is positive. It provides for decentralization and guarantees of democracy. Tomorrow, it could create economic strains among the regions and create a new layer of bureaucracy."

"WHY DO THE HEATHEN RAGE?"

Psalms 2:1 and Acts 4:25

"FOR THE WAGES OF SIN IS DEATH; BUT THE GIFT OF GOD IS ETERNAL LIFE THROUGH JESUS CHRIST OUR LORD" — Romans 6:23
"AND MUCH STUDY IS A WEARINESS OF THE FLESH. LET US HEAR THE CONCLUSION OF THE WHOLE MATTER: FEAR GOD, AND KEEP HIS COMMANDMENTS: FOR THIS IS THE WHOLE DUTY OF MAN: FOR GOD SHALL BRING EVERY WORK INTO JUDGMENT, WITH EVERY SECRET THING, WHETHER IT BE GOOD, OR WHETHER IT BE EVIL" Ecclesiastes 12:12-14.

THAT CALL NOT ON HIS NAME." THEY THAT DESPISE ME SHALL BE LIGHTLY ESTEEMED." Examples crowd upon us from every quarter: Every neighborhood furnishes them!

In Numbers 32:23 God says: "BE SURE YOUR SINS WILL FIND YOU OUT!" In Deuteronomy 32:22 God says: "O THAT THEY WOULD CONSIDER THEIR LATTER END!" Sin is any want of conformity unto, or transgression of the Law of God! We now quote God's Second Commandment as found in Exodus 20: 4-6:

"THOU SHALT NOT MAKE UNTO THINE ANY GRAVEN IMAGE, OR ANY LIKENESS OF ANYTHING THAT IS IN THE HEAVEN ABOVE, OR THAT IS IN THE EARTH BENEATH, OR THAT IS IN THE WATER UNDER THE EARTH: THOU SHALT NOT BOW DOWN THYSELF TO THEM, NOR SERVE THEM: FOR I THE LORD THY GOD AM A JEALOUS GOD, VISITING THE INIQUITY OF THE FATHERS UPON THE CHILDREN UNTO THE THIRD AND FOURTH GENERATION OF THEM THAT HATE ME: AND SHOWING MERCY UNTO THOUSANDS OF THEM THAT LOVE ME, AND KEEP MY COMMANDMENTS."

Several times friends with the desire to be helpful have suggested a change in the name of this Column. Wonder if unconsciously, they too resent the negativity of God's "THOU SHALT NOT!" What use have you for a servant that won't carry out orders? "WHY CALL YE ME LORD, LORD, AND DO NOT THE THINGS WHICH I SAY?" — Luke 6:46. True Faith God will "POUR OUT HIS FURY UPON THE FAMILIES"

Coal operators criticize L&N service

where it can't or won't provide reasonable service."
O'Neal said the ICC already has several investigations of L&N under way. Last week, he said, the agency issued an order requiring more efficient use of coal cars. Next week, he said, the ICC will begin a "saturation" review of L&N's freight traffic policies.
Kareem said the ICC already had on hand a "massive record" about L&N's problems but, thus far, had "failed to follow through."

Nearly a year ago, he said, a regional ICC official had learned that L&N was favoring one of its largest customers — the U.S. Steel Co.'s mines in Harlan County.

Several coal operators said U.S. Steel was getting 100 percent of its orders for cars. Nail, the L&N vice president, denied that assertion and said all unit-train shippers, including U.S. Steel, were getting 60 percent.

A law passed in 1975, O'Neal said, may somewhat limit the ICC's ability to attack the problem.
Under an amendment to the law, sponsored by U.S. Sen. Wendell H. Ford,

D-Ky., and drafted by L&N attorneys, railroads have been allowed to set up separate service categories for single-car and unit-train shippers.

As a result, O'Neal said, the ICC may well be barred from charging that L&N is illegally discriminating against single-car shippers.
Even so, Kareem and McDowell said, O'Neal also promised to investigate charges that L&N had denied coal cars to operators who complained about its service.

"To my knowledge," Nail said in a later telephone interview, "there has never been any retaliation against any producer in the coalfields for any statements they made — good or bad."

The hearing will begin at 3 p.m. in the state board of education room on the 17th floor of Capital Plaza Tower in Frankfort.

State cancels bids on construction at governor's house

The Courier-Journal Bureau
FRANKFORT, Ky. — The scheduled opening of bids on about $480,000 worth of construction work at the governor's mansion has been canceled, Russell McClure, state finance and administration secretary, said yesterday.
McClure said he canceled the June 30 bid opening because of lack of interest from contractors. No general contractors had requested copies of specifications, he said.

The project was to include a new front driveway and an iron fence across the back of the mansion grounds.
State Auditor George Adkins had criticized the project earlier. McClure said criticism of the project was not a factor in his decision.

Klan rally planned

NICHOLASVILLE — The United Klans of America has scheduled a state Ku Klux Klan rally July 1 on a farm 1 1/2 miles south of Nicholasville.

John Palmore of Louisville, grand knight hawk for Kentucky, said yesterday the rally would be open to the public. A similar rally was held at the same site last October.

Stones tickets set record

LEXINGTON — Ticket sales for Thursday's Rolling Stones concert set a record for Rupp Arena, according to Rick Reno, director of operations for the 23,000-seat facility.

"We sold approximately 20,000 tickets in eight hours," Reno said.

Reno said a few hundred tickets remained available yesterday. All were "obstructed view" bleacher seats behind the stage in the arena's upper deck.

UK official charged

FORT KNOX — Fred Marshall Kimmye, an official of the University of Kentucky Center at Fort Knox, has been charged with theft of more than $17,000 from the center, according to Larry Long, a spokesman for the FBI.

"The warrant for Kimmye's arrest was issued May 31, but Kimmye has not been apprehended. Long said.

The warrant states that Kimmye is charged with taking $17,012 in general Equivalency Diploma funds, $73 in currency returned to Kimmye in connection with a previous burglary, and $68 in unauthorized and unpaid telephone bills.

Doctor pleads guilty

PADUCAH — Dr. Clarence Jeredon Mills, 55, of Clinton, Ky., pleaded guilty Thursday in U.S. District Court to 21 counts of submitting false Medicaid payment requests, according to release from Benjamin H. Cook, FBI special agent in Louisville.

Mills was indicted by a federal grand jury in Louisville on May 8 on 21 misdemeanor violations.

Mills was fined $10,000 and sentenced to one year probation under the condition that he donate his services to an area public health center one day a week during the probation.

'There's not a whole lot we can do'

Land-use planning stirs protests in Madison County

Associated Press
RICHMOND, Ky. — A proposal for land-use planning in Madison County has become a major controversy, with Fiscal Court saying that such planning is needed to meet rapid growth and many residents charging that the government is trying to grab control of their land.

Three public meetings were held this week and a fourth was scheduled last night at the Union City Ruritan Club.

Glenn Roberts, a farmer and co-founder of Concerned Citizens Opposed to Fiscal County Zoning, said in a recent interview that 95 percent of the county's residents are opposed to zoning.

"Let's say you've got 20 acres and your son is getting married and you want to give him a couple of acres to build a house and get started," Roberts said. "Well, with zoning, you couldn't do that. You'd have to give him at least 10 acres because there would be a 10-acre limit on your sites."

Roberts conceded, however, there was little the group could do except try to persuade the magistrates to abandon efforts to appoint a planning and zoning commission.

"There's not a whole lot we can do, as far as I know," he said. "We hope that, if this fiscal court has the power to vote the power to vote it out."

Asked if the group planned court action to prevent appointment of the commission, Roberts said, "I don't really think so. I don't see how we'd benefit by that."

If personally think some of the magistrates are beginning to come over a bit. I can see some weakening about some of them."

Roberts helped form an anti-zoning rally Wednesday night at Madison Central High School. Harvey Howard, a Nashville Republican opposing U.S. Sen. Howard Baker in Tennessee's senatorial primary, told approximately 800 county residents to appear in force before Fiscal Court and demand an end to zoning plans.

Another 100 residents attended a public forum Thursday night in Berea, which was sponsored by the Berea League of Women Voters.

Magistrate Ed Chenault said the county's imminent growth problems prompted Fiscal Court to contract for a land-use study by the Blue Grass Area Development District.

John Shell, an employee of the agency, said the researchers studied people and population and how growth related to jobs, homes, community, transportation facilities, and total environment.

But public sentiment at the forum seemed overwhelmingly anti-zoning.

An unidentified spectator said, "We don't want it. Why don't you fix the roads and send these people (the planners) back to Lexington? We're having a harder time with politicians than our forefathers had with the Indians."

Grandmother's helper

Doug Bunch, 6, helped his grandmother, Mrs. Millard Bunch, on the weeds out of the rows of pole beans in her garden on U.S. 68 near Edmonton in Metcalfe County. Mrs. Bunch said her beans were doing fine but could use a little more rain.

Let's bury John Y. Brown's losing proposition and forget it

Louisville won't be getting a professional basketball team. Dies irae, dies illa! I went down to jump off the bridge as soon as I heard but couldn't fight my way to the rail.

The whole thing makes me wonder how John Y. Brown Jr. ever got to be a chicken magistrate. He must get his public relations advisers from the Yellow Pages. By making public the process whereby Louisville was eliminated as a potential NBA franchise, Brown guaranteed that those fans who have forgiven him for trading Dan Issel away from the old Kentucky spectacular equated him anew for declining to move his NBA team to Louisville.

I don't know how Louisville could have hurried Brown any more subjectively than I do. Has local businessmen suffered as deadbeats, have meekly suffered Brown's abuse. Sportswriters have accepted Brown's specious equation of basketball and progress without skepticism. County Attorney Bruce Miller has devoted a couple of years of his life to the cause. Gov. Julian Carroll has made oblique assurances of his help and support.

As might have been expected, Brown blamed the arts for Louisville's basketball loss. If he's the city's movers and shakers as he's interested in basketball in such things as theater, opera and ballet, Brown said, we'd be able to get a team.

John Filiatreau, Courier-Journal Columnist

Louisville Times sports editor Dick Fenlon commended Brown's lapse of logic by noting that a group of Louisvilleans last year managed to raise $1.5 million to buy a Rembrandt, but nobody wants to invest in a pro basketball team.

But the biggest reason Brown failed to find patrons have nothing to do with the arts or with penuriousness. These are the real problems:

Pro basketball players are paid better than God.

National Basketball Association teams bring an endless schedule of killing boring games to eliminate only a handful of teams from the playoffs.

At its best, professional basketball isn't half as exciting as college and high school ball — especially in Kentucky.

Another thing Brown carefully avoided ed mentioning is that he was asking Louisville's business community to invest in a franchise that has been a financial disaster and an athletic gift. The Buffalo franchise has been the NBA's biggest embarrassment.

The Buffalo Braves surely shouldn't be compared to a Rembrandt. And I don't know why Louisville's business community should be expected to share Brown's losses. If he wants to own a pro team — surely the most indulgent of hobbies — he's entitled to the heartache. But we shouldn't assume he was trying to peddle a winner here; he was hunting for backup money. Better we should invest in Universal Widgets.

I especially have been appalled by Brown's tendency to consider pro sports the index of a community's progressiveness. That's patently ridiculous.

More on Mayor William Stansbury's new payroll ordinance:

Forty-four city employees could get unscheduled raises under the new proposal. If each got the maximum, the city payroll would be increased by $152,000.

There is no such money in Stansbury's city budget, so any increases in the payroll would have to come from some other budget category. You rob Peter, and rob Paul, and pay Jacques.

Under the terms of the ordinance, certain city employees who have earned merit raises in the past, and consequently make more than some others of equal status, would be deprived of such raises in the future.

To cap all these clever moves, and kill off morale wherever it survives, Stansbury this week ordered his personnel director to require that city employees work a 40-hour week instead of the 35 or 37 1/2 hours they've been working for years.

Naturally, this change will affect the lowest-ranking city employees (the ones whose raises will be held at 5.5 percent while making little difference to the honchos.

The troops in City Hall reportedly are up in arms — organizing protests, erecting defiant post signs in the corridors, swearing political vengeance, talking about a union.

What statesmanship! What diplomacy! What tact!

Verily, Louisville doesn't deserve a mayor of Stansbury's inestimable class.

(Late bulletin: An aldermanic committee yesterday recommended turning down most of Stansbury's proposals, including the 40-hour week. Now the recommendations go to the full board.)

Limit controls on coal mines, governor says

WASHINGTON — West Virginia Gov. Jay Rockefeller IV wants less governmental regulation of the coal industry as a means of boosting production and efficiency.

Rockefeller told the Mining and Reclamation Council of America yesterday that government "overregulation can be as damaging to our livelihoods as underregulation can be to our lives."

Recently named by President Carter as chairman of the Presidential Commission on Coal, Rockefeller said the commission would address the issue of government regulations in its investigations.

If a person wants to open a mine, he said, he must deal with 15 government agencies and fill out endless forms.

"I do believe we can do better than that," he said.

Coed sues college football player for assault

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — A University of Tennessee coed filed a $2 million suit yesterday against a university football player indicted on a charge of assaulting her in a fight over a parking space.

The suit, filed on behalf of Judith Thig in Knox County Circuit Court, also names as a defendant the owner of the apartment complex where her boyfriend lived and where the altercation occurred last Jan. 29.

Rick Powers, 20, of Birmingham, Ala., is accused in the suit of striking back of his hand, causing permanent loss of vision in her right eye.

Powers, a junior linebacker, was a criminal arraigner yesterday on a charge of mayhem in connection with the incident on the Shelbourne Towers parking lot near the UT campus.

Executive director of agency serving Appalachia resigns

WASHINGTON — Harry Teter Jr. resigned yesterday as executive director of the 13-state Appalachian Regional Commission, apparently at the request of the commission.

The resignation is effective July 1.

Teter, executive director for five years, told a meeting of the commission staff: "I have always shared the understanding with the federal and states co-chairmen that when they felt that a change in leadership would be beneficial to the program, I would honor that decision."

The executive director is appointed by and is responsible to the full commission, which is composed of a federal co-chairman appointed by the president and the governors of the 13 Appalachian states.

Teter joined the commission staff in 1974 as assistant general counsel. He said that he intends to return to private law practice.

In 1978, Teter was involved in an internal fight over a request for $30,000 in ARC money to build a recreational park in Dekalb, Miss.

Teter's staff recommended that the project be withdrawn. Teter disagreed with the staff report, and it was replaced in the file with a more positive assessment. The project ultimately was financed, and the staff report was returned to the file.

Nashville police vote Monday on pay raise

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Nashville police, who have demanded a 10 percent pay raise, are to vote on a proposal Monday giving them an 11 percent hike by January if residents approve a local sales tax increase.

The Monday vote would come the day before the Metropolitan Council's third and final reading of the $28 million budget for the next fiscal year. Police men are threatening to strike at midnight Tuesday if their demands are not met.

In addition to the pay increase, policemen are asking the city government, which pays 50 percent of their health insurance premiums, to pick up the entire tab.

The council's Budget and Finance Committee voted Thursday night to recommend that a referendum on increasing the local sales tax by three-quarters of a cent be placed on the November election ballot.

across the state line

FRANKFORT, Ky. — The new state Professional Employment Commission held its first meeting yesterday and agreed to study procedures proposed by the Department of Personnel for awarding professional service contracts.

The five-member commission was created by the 1978 General Assembly to replace the Personnel Service Contract Review Commission.

Boyle County farmer William Balden was elected chairman and said he hopes to make the work of the commission non-controversial by discussing the contracts as openly as possible.

The awarding of personal service contracts for various professional services to state government has generated controversy.

The new commission will review professional services not covered by a new registry established in the Personnel Department as well as appeals from details of contracts.

Life insurance benefits have risen

Life insurance benefit payments in the United States totaled nearly $10 billion in 1977, up from $8.8 billion a year earlier, according to the American Council of Life Insurance.

Contractors to resume KY 292 job

Residents ordered to let workers in

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Work on improving KY 292 in Martin County, halted when residents blocked the road to protest damage caused by overweight coal trucks, is being resumed.

State Transportation Secretary Calvin Grayson has directed Bureau of Highways contractors to continue their work.

Members of the Martin County Better Roads Organization closed off a 3.9-mile section of the highway near Lovely earlier this month to dramatize complaints that heavy trucks were tearing up the gravel and asphalt road and spreading dust.

The chain and fence blockade prevented construction workers from bringing in equipment to work on a $400,000 road base reconstruction project.

Transportation officials, concerned about the delay in the project originally scheduled to be completed by Sept. 1, filed suit in Martin Circuit Court last week seeking to reopen the road.

Martin Circuit Judge W. B. Hazelrigg said Thursday the makeshift barricade could remain, so long as Bureau of Highways trucks, construction equipment and school buses are able to use the road.

The judge scheduled another hearing July 10.

500,000 children handicapped

WASHINGTON — About 200,000 of the nation's 45 million school-age children have orthopedic impairments, the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare says. Nearly 40,000 have serious visual impairments and 250,000 are deaf or hard of hearing.

Teamsters chief says inflation will determine wage demands

WASHINGTON — Teamsters President Frank Fitzsimmons, accusing the White House of snubbing him, said yesterday that his union will show wage restraint at the bargaining table only if the government curbs rising prices first. "Wage restraint alone is not going to beat inflation," Fitzsimmons said. His union negotiates contracts for more than 750,000 workers next year.

"He added at a news conference that any union bargainer who tries to restrain wages in negotiations without taking into account the rising cost of living is crazy."

Fitzsimmons attacked White House economic advisers for ignoring the nation's largest union while trying to win pledges from other large unions to support President Carter's anti-inflation program.

"I haven't been contacted officially from the administration since the president took office. No call, no invitation, nothing," said Fitzsimmons, whose 2-million member union has been the subject of numerous federal investigations into alleged corruption.

"I think that if I was president of the United States and I had this problem, I would talk to the janitor if I had to," he said.

"He said inflation is caused by high fuel prices, deficit spending, high interest rates, trade deficits and tax increases."

The administration has asked most major industries and unions to support the voluntary anti-inflation program.

The Teamsters began bargaining late this year on three national trucking agreements that expire next March. The pacts cover 500,000 workers and set the pattern for other agreements covering another 250,000 to 300,000 Teamsters.

Asked if the Teamsters will ignore Carter's wage guidelines, Fitzsimmons said, "We don't mean to Johnny outstep. We will do anything that anybody else does."

Last month, AFL-CIO President George Meany said organized labor would not bargain for smaller wage increases in upcoming negotiations unless the administration first succeeds in slowing price rises.

In a prepared statement on inflation yesterday, Fitzsimmons called on the administration "to put the brakes on inflation," which has been running at an annual rate of about 10 percent for millions of dollars that the government alleged were lost by the fund because of bad loans.

Finally, Fitzsimmons denied reports he was planning to retire and said the union, on the contrary, he planned to run again for president of the union in 1981.

Before Fitzsimmons' news conference, Pete Camarata, a leader of a dissident teamster group, Teamsters for a Democratic Union, announced that he planned to run for the presidency of the union. Camarata, 31, a truck leader from Detroit, charged that Fitzsimmons and other union officials engaged in "sweetheart deals" with employers at the expense of rank and file members. "All they do is take the money and run," he said.

Teamsters for a Democratic Union is one of several dissident Teamster groups seeking to oust Fitzsimmons.

said was about $150,000 a year plus expenses, was lower than that of corporate executives.

As for racketeering, he said that the union had been "investigated from hell to high water" and challenged the Justice Department to "indict and prosecute us" if it had the evidence.

He also denied that the Teamsters' Central States Pension Fund, which has been under extended investigation, owed money and would have to take part of the next wage increase. He did concede, however, that the fund shows a number of loans in default.

Last year, the government forced Fitzsimmons and several other union officers to resign as trustees of the Central States pension fund. In February, the Labor Department sued Fitzsimmons and 17 other former trustees for millions of dollars that the government alleged were lost by the fund because of bad loans.

Finally, Fitzsimmons denied reports he was planning to retire and said the union, on the contrary, he planned to run again for president of the union in 1981.

Teamsters President Frank E. Fitzsimmons said yesterday that despite President Carter's plea that labor help decelerate inflation, his union, the largest in the nation, would not moderate wage demands "until the time comes when government can assure Teamsters that inflation is under control."

From Dow Jones and AP Dispatches

KU profits down
A drop in profits in the 12 months ended May 31 was reported by Kentucky Utilities Co. The Lexington firm had net income of $16.84 million, equal to $1.38 a common share, on revenue of $283.89 million, compared with net income of $24.81 million, or $2.52 a common share, on revenue of $233.27 million in the previous 12 months.

Coal production up
Soft-coal production in the week ended June 17 rose to 15,675 million tons from 15,395 million tons the week before and 15,305 million tons in the year-earlier week, the National Coal Association reported. However, coal production this year is below the comparable 1977 period because of the 110-day miners' strike that ended March 25.

LG&E plans stock sale
Louisville Gas & Electric Co. plans to sell 250,000 preferred shares of stock on Tuesday through competitive bids. The proceeds will be used to retire short-term debt linked to new construction.

97 F-15s ordered
The Air Force yesterday announced the award of a $980.8 million contract to McDonnell Douglas Corp. of St. Louis for production of 97 F-15 jet fighter planes this fiscal year.

The contract also covers advance buys of materials to be used in production of F-15s next fiscal year, as well as a variety of supporting equipment.

The Air Force plans a total of 729 F-15s, of which more than 254 have been delivered so far.

House restores Amtrak cuts
The House yesterday approved a stay of execution for more than one-third of Amtrak passenger rail network, which Transportation Secretary Brock Adams wants to cut.

The bill, passed 204 to 89, keeps 8,100 miles of passenger track and service in the system that Adams proposed to cut from the 27,000-mile network.

Adams said Amtrak deficits could soar to $1 billion by 1984, if the route structure is not trimmed.

Auto sales soar again
The contract also covers advance buys of materials to be used in production of F-15s next fiscal year, as well as a variety of supporting equipment.

it was the second straight record 10-day sales period.

Chrysler Corp. reported that the sales rate for its new Plymouth Horizon and Dodge Omni jumped 21 percent from levels earlier this month.

Pet agrees to takeover
Pet Inc. yesterday dropped its opposition to a takeover by ICI Industries and agreed to a revised public offer of $55 a share for all of the firm's outstanding stock.

In a joint statement the firms also agreed that the Chicago-based ICI and St. Louis-based Pet will negotiate to acquire Hardest's Food Systems Inc. of Rocky Mount, N.C. based fast-food chain.

May U.S. deficit $1.7 billion
The government reported a deficit of $1.7 billion in May, bringing the total deficit so far this fiscal year to $45.7 billion, the Treasury Department said yesterday.

The Treasury Department did not revise its estimate of a fiscal year deficit of $53 billion.

State to help farmers battle beetle invasion

Associated Press

FRANKFORT, Ky. — Some central Kentuckians are going to get state help to battle an invasion of Japanese beetles.

That's not a new kind of small import, car or the latest international rock band, but a plague of shiny green insects.

Kentucky Agriculture Commissioner Thomas Harris promised yesterday to spend $15,000 to fight the insects, and he said he's also asked for federal aid because it appears that problems with the pests may be even greater this year than last.

Japanese beetles destroyed hundreds of acres of the central Kentucky corn crop last summer, reducing yields by 5 percent to 100 percent in some fields, Harris said.

Harris said he is optimistic that the beetles can be controlled with insecticide, he is pessimistic about the cost, noting that farmers may have to spray more than once. "You're talking about $7 an acre," he said. "If they have to spray three or four times, there goes the profit."

Harris said he has not decided how to allocate the $15,000 in the department's budget, saying only that he's looking for "the most effective way."

AIR POLLUTION:

In Louisville, it kills people and trees, it rusts cast iron overnight, dissolves limestone, peels paint, cracks tire sidewalls, causes coughs, nausea and headaches, and now it may cause Louisville to lose federal money for sewers, and highways.

Courier-Journal environmental writer Jim Detjen has spent the past month investigating the causes and the seriousness of Louisville's dirty air, including its effect on your health. As part of our special report, national reporter Gordon Englehart writes about Portland, Oregon, a city that is reversing its pollution problems.

Even good Kentucky shooting must get better for upset

Jerry Eaves of the Kentucky All-Stars aims a pass over the arms of Randy Wittman of Indiana in last Saturday's series opener won by Indiana 100-90. The teams meet again tonight at Indianapolis.

By BOB WHITE
Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer
INDIANAPOLIS — Fifty-one per cent shooting will win most basketball games, but it didn't for the Kentucky All-Stars last Saturday night in Louisville. That's why coach Tom Creamer is hoping for better accuracy from his players tonight when they try to keep Indiana from sweeping the two-game series.
"I wasn't all that pleased with our 51.3 per cent shooting in the first game," Creamer said, referring to Kentucky's 100-90 loss to the Hoosiers in the opener of the annual World Series of high school basketball. "If we improve on our shot selection, we can shoot 55 to 60 per cent. Our shot selection wasn't bad from long range, but it was from 8-10 feet."
Creamer says that Kentucky also must control the tempo of play if it is to overcome Indiana's overwhelming height advantage and the partisan Hoosier crowd of 16,000 that is expected to pack Market Square Arena for the 8:30 p.m. (CDT) tipoff.

Before the boys tangle, Kentucky's girls go after their fourth straight win over Indiana in their 6:30 p.m. contest. Kentucky won a week ago 64-50, giving coach Roy Bowling a 3-0 mark in his two years as coach and Kentucky a 4-edge in the young series.
Indiana's boys will be seeking their fourth sweep in the last five years, their 15th win in the last 20 games and 40th in the series that benefits blind people from both states.
"Indiana won the first game early (when it spurred to a 12-2 lead) and when it went into the four-corner offense (with eight minutes left and leading 78-69)," Creamer said. "What we want to do this time is jump out on them and control the tempo so that we can have something to say about the style of play late in the game. Of course, that's all based on which team is ahead."
Kentucky's hopes of grabbing an early lead, and possibly going into a four-corner offense of its own, may be better the second time around because Vince

Taylor will be in the starting lineup. Taylor, a 6-foot-5 guard-forward from Lexington Tales Creek, came off the bench with his team trailing 12-2 and pumped in 22 points. Only Jack Moore of Muncie Central, the 5-8 guard who ran Indiana's four-corner offense to perfection, scored more points (24).
Creamer, coach of Shelby County's state champions, plans to start three guards and two inside people. Taylor, 6-4 Jerry Eaves of Ballard and 6-4 Jeff Jones of Apollo will rotate among the one guard spot and two wing positions in Kentucky's 1-2-2 offense. Creamer said he favors starting 6-4 Mr. Basketball Doug Schloemer of Covington Holmes and 6-5 Harold Moore of Lexington Henry Clay inside, but there is a chance 6-8 Gus Rudolph of Shawnee may start.
Indiana has five players taller than Rudolph — Kentucky's biggest man — with 7-1 Wallace Bryant of Gary Emerson the giant among giants. Starting

Rash of injuries puts Morgan on sidelines for Dodger series

Associated Press
LOS ANGELES — Joe Morgan, suffering from muscle pulls, is a doubtful starter as the Cincinnati Reds play the Los Angeles Dodgers in a three-game, weekend series. Today's game will be on national television (NBC, Channel 3 in Louisville, 4 p.m. EDT).
"Morgan, who went out Wednesday night in San Francisco, did not play in the Reds' 5-0 shutout of the Giants on Thursday night."
"I'm taking off. I don't know how long I just hope they don't need me. I hope they can win without me, but I can't take this now," said the Reds' All-Star second baseman.
Morgan has been bothered by a groin injury, a lower abdomen muscle pull, a sore wrist and a bruised thigh.
"I can't concentrate up there at the plate," he said. "Really, I sat down after the game (Wednesday) and I tried to remember how they pitched to me. I don't know. I always can tell you what pitch a guy threw me and how he set me up, but I was blank. I don't know the sequence."

"I just get up and stroll to the park and hope some of them come. I just keep my fingers crossed," said manager Sparky Anderson philosophically of his ailing squad. The Reds trail the Giants by a game for the National League West lead.
Morgan, 34, had an eight-game hitting streak going until he pulled a stomach muscle Saturday diving into third base. Since then, he has only one hit in 12 times at bat.
"Thirty-four is not old. Baseball people may think so, but I do not agree," Morgan said. "I don't agree with a lot of things baseball people say."
The Reds beat the Giants 5-0 Thursday night on a combined three-hitter by Bill Bonham (8-1) and Manny Sarmiento. Anderson, pleased with the victory, said, "You can't let anybody get too far in front. From Sept. 9 to 28, the Reds, Giants and Dodgers play each other, and I don't want anyone going into that stretch too relaxed."

"If you get behind two other clubs, it's tough, but I expect a three-team race all the way. Losing two out of three to us probably won't bother the Giants, though. They have the pitching and they play hard."
Giants' starter Bob Knepper was jolted for two runs in the first, while victimized by shoddy fielding. Ken Griffey singled with one out and scored with the help of two errors by center fielder Larry Herndon.
San Francisco manager Joe Altobelli said, "We're looking forward to playing Atlanta (four games) and we also know the Reds and Dodgers will be facing each other. So we have a chance to gain some ground."

Crenshaw blows shot for lead

Associated Press
Ben Crenshaw was on his way to assuming the second-round lead in the Cullinan Open golf tournament yesterday until he came to No. 18 — his ninth hole of the day since he started at No. 10.
He was two-under for the round and three-under for the tournament when:
He dumped his third shot into a pond guarding the green on the par five hole and had to lay out with a penalty.
He walked back 80 yards or so to drop, then hit into a bunker behind the green for five.
He exploded out of the trap but short of the putting surface for six.
He chipped 15 feet past the cup for seven.
He putted two feet past for eight.
He sank the two-footer for nine.
When it was over, Crenshaw dropped his putter and applauded himself.
When the day ended, Jeff Hewes and Pat McCowan shared the lead in the $250,000 tournament at Oakville, Ont., with 36-hole totals of 140, two under par on the 7,050-yard Glen Abbey Golf Club course.
McCowan birdied the final hole for a three-under 88 while Hewes, the first day leader with a 67, slipped to a 73. Crenshaw was at 144 after his 74.

Jane Blalock Ben Crenshaw

Six strokes back was Nancy Lopez, who was stumbling in her bid to extend her all-time women's professional golf record to six straight victories and close in on the men's record of 11 in a row by Byron Nelson in 1945. Her 73 left her back in the pack with 38 holes to play on the 6,388-yard course.
"I just didn't have the concentration today," Lopez said. "I was tired. I was thinking about interviews instead of my golf game."
Blalock, who lost to Lopez in a stirring stretch duel last weekend at Rochester, N.Y., made a late charge, picking up five birdies on the back side for a 32.
She was one under at the turn and birdied the last three holes after her caddy, Lee Hetrick, promised to buy her dinner if she could get in five-under.
"I'm going to look in the Yellow Pages for an expensive restaurant," she said, smiling.
All week Lopez has been besieged by photographers, writers and autograph-seeking fans. It may have cost her.
"I think last week I was getting tired, it was such a high I kept my strength," Lopez said at a post-round news conference. "This week the pressure wasn't as great and I just tired out. I started getting a headache on the last couple of holes."

Combs, Potter to duel for Women's title

By JOHNNY CARRICO
 Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

PAINTSVILLE, Ky., June 23 (AP)—Kaye Potter, No. 4 for Combs or No. 3 for Potter?

The answer to the question will start to unfold at 10 a.m. today at the Paintsville Country Club as defending champion Anne Combs of Lexington and Kaye Potter of Louisville battle for the Women's State Amateur Golf Championship.

Being in the championship round hardly is a novel experience for them. The 33-year-old Combs is in the round of two for the fourth straight year and her fifth altogether. Potter is making her sixth try for a title, having won twice.

Combs defeated her longtime friend, Jackie Hacker of Versailles, 5 and 4 in yesterday's semifinals. Potter had to go almost the route before subbing Joan Rizer of Bardstown 2 and 1.

Their meeting over 18 holes will be the fourth match between two women who rank at the top of Kentucky golf. Potter has won all three of them, which may provide some psychological advantage for the 27-year-old housewife who won her titles as Kaye Beard of Campbellsville. Her first was here in 1966.

Combs' victories came at Lexington Tates Creek in 1967, at Winchester in 1974 and last year at Nicholasville. Potter's other title was achieved at Wildwood in Louisville in 1969. Although she was only 15 years old when she claimed her first crown, she now has gone 12 years without a title. She was runnerup on the 10th and squared the match at three times and skipped 1976 while starting a family.

In contrast to her walkaway 9 and 7 victory over Lee Davis of Bowling Green in the quarterfinals, Potter was in trouble early in the semifinals. Rizer, a five-time South Central Kentucky champion, bogged the first two holes with pars as Potter lost a stroke in a water hole hazard on No. 1 and three-putted No. 2. Potter got one back on the third when Rizer landed in a ditch that cost her a stroke and the match went even at No. 5 when Potter holed a five-foot putt for a birdie.

"I wasn't trying to make it because it was downhill and I wanted to play it safe," Potter said. "But it went in."

Potter went ahead for the first time on the seventh when Rizer three-putted, then added No. 8 although she three-putted for a bogey five. She turned 2 up with a five-over par 40. Rizer narrowed the gap with a birdie

After Potter halved 14 by sinking a five-foot pressure putt, she captured the 15th when Rizer took two to get out of a trap on the par three. After the 16th was halved, Potter wrapped it up on the 17th with a par three. She knocked her tee shot five feet from the pin while Rizer was short, chipped to six feet and missed the putt. Potter was six over for the 17 holes.

"I was wild sometimes and over-swinging," Potter said. "For some reason I felt kinda tight or tense this morning. I had to wait a long time for breakfast at this restaurant and that kind made me upset."

"I could have played better," Rizer said. "I was chipping short and putting short all day. I had my opportunities. The hole that best me, maybe was that par three when I got in the trap."

Combs, one over for 14 holes, zoomed into a 3 up lead with a string of three straight wins starting with No. 3. She took the third when Hacker put her second in a trap, the fourth with a par and the fifth with a birdie two-foot putt.

She increased the margin to 4 up at No. 7 with a par and kicked it to 5 up at the eighth with a par when Hacker pushed her tee shot, leaving her a difficult approach to an elevated green. Hacker won her only hole of the day at No. 9 with a par three as Combs three-putted. Combs turned 4 up with a par 38 and from then on Hacker, the 1973 winner, was living on borrowed time.

"Hacker didn't play her usual game," Combs noted. "I fully expected to go 18 holes."

Hacker said she hit the ball well until she got to the green, "and then I putted atrociously. I was mostly missing the short ones. But Anne was very good."

with Bryant and Moore will be 4-8 Mr. Basketball Dave Magley of South Bend LaSalle and 6-7 Thad Garner of Hammond Not at forwards and 6-5 Randy Widman of Indianapolis Ben Davis at the other guard.

Indiana spent most of this week working on rebounding and defense. The shorter but quicker Kentucky team out-pounded Indiana 39-38 in the first game.

Our week-side forward must go to the boards harder because their zone is doubling up on Bryant to keep him off the boards," Indiana coach Eric Clark said. "If they didn't, he'd eat 'em up. Also, we need to get back quicker on defense. We gave them too many fast-break baskets and let Taylor penetrate too much."

Indiana will use its two tallest players, Bryant and 6-8 Landon Turner of Indianapolis Tech, at the same time but Turner will not start.

"We want to utilize their height because Kentucky out-rebounded us the last time," Clark said. "If both get into foul trouble, we can still match Kentucky in size. It was because of height advantage which forced Kentucky into a zone defense. Their zone doesn't worry me because we have an outside shooting (Indiana shot 53.4 per cent in its first win)."

GIRLS — Kentucky is down to 11 players after Tanya Fogle of Lexington and Robin Harmon of Sheldon Clark failed to report back after the first game. "Tanya didn't tell me she wasn't coming back so when I got in touch with her I told her it would be better if she didn't return," coach Bowling said. "Harmon just got homesick."

Laurie Hetsley of Hughes-Kirk, who missed the first game because of strep throat, is back but she won't play much. "She doesn't have much strength," Bowling said.

Bowling, from state champion Laurel County, expects two new faces in Indiana's lineup, 6-foot Kathie Calloway of Michigan City Rogers and 5-4 Rita Foster of Jac-Cen-Del. "I figure Indiana will try and shut off the middle and play a tighter defense," Bowling said. "We hurt them a lot inside the first game. Indiana will apply more pressure defense, but if we play up to our potential we can win."

Sharon Miller of Moore, who scored 10 points as a reserve in the first game, will replace Fogle. Barbara Harkins of Ashland Blazer or Bonnie Stremore of Laurel County will start at the other forward with Donna Stephens of Harrison County at center, and Miss Basketball Irene Moore of Breathitt County and Shari Price of Henry County at guards.

How to get a first class tune-up without leaving your driveway.

We're MARS—Mobile Auto Repair Service—the tune-up specialists who actually come to your home or business to take care of your car.

Here are six important reasons why you think you should call MARS for your next tune-up.

Our mechanics are all well-trained, experienced, and familiar with the inner workings of just about every American-made car and most foreign cars on the road today. They're also neat, courteous, and as anxious as you are that your car runs trouble-free until your owners manual recommends tune-up service again.

Our parts are first quality with famous names like AC, Fram, Autolite, and Borg Warner. If you like, you can specify which brands from our inventory you want installed in your car.

Our equipment is, very simply, the best. Each MARS truck comes equipped with a state-of-the-art electronic engine analyzer that enables the mechanic to "see" inside your car's engine and spot hidden problems before they cost you money... or worse.

Our service is prompt, efficient, and complete. We'll arrive at your home or business at the appointed time and take only as long as necessary to do the job right. (With most cars, you'll be back on the road in about an hour.) We'll install new spark plugs, points, and condenser.

set the timing and dwell, adjust the carburetor, and check your engine electronically to make sure it's running properly. And, of course, we return all worn parts.

Our guarantee is simple and ironclad. All of our work—parts and labor—is guaranteed 100% for a full 90 days. Period.

Our price is only $28.95 if your car has four cylinders, $31.95 if it has six cylinders, and $34.95 if it has eight cylinders. These prices include all parts and apply to all cars with air conditioning or without. And you can even charge it with your Visa or Master Charge card.

At MARS, we'd like to prove to you just how easy and convenient getting a tune-up can be. To make an appointment just give us a call. Your car will thank you... and so will we.

Aladdin Mitha, who was involved in considerable controversy with opponent Jim Novitsky while beating him in the Metro Tennis Classic yesterday, sizes up a return en route to his 6-3, 6-4 victory.

Madison* qualifies; IU-Irish game off?

DRIVERS Joe Peddie and Chuck King qualified Miss Madison and University of Detroit race for unlimited hydroplanes.

BOAT The Boy Overboard driven by Bob Maschmedt of Seattle and Lakeshore, piloted by Terry Turner of Fullerton, Calif., will attempt to qualify early Sunday. If they are successful, there will be 10 boats roaring over the three-mile course on the Detroit River in quest of the $35,000 in prize money. First prize will be worth just over $8,000. No qualifying is set for today.

TRIALS The top qualifier in three days of trials was Atlas Van Lines, driven by Bill Muncie, at 129,188 miles per hour. Muncie won the season opener June 4 in Miami.

OTHER QUALIFIERS include Miss Budweiser, the defending national champion, driven by Rod Snyder; The Snake Shop (Chip Hanebery); Miss North Tool (Steve Jones); U-68 (Tom Martin); Probe (Bob Miller).

SUNDAY the race is the final tuneup before the July 2 Gold Cup at Owensboro, Ky.

BASKETBALL

Next season's game between Indiana University and Notre Dame, slated for Dec. 13 at South Bend, is still listed on the Notre Dame schedule, but IU is assuming it will not be played and is looking for another opponent on that date.

"I can't find anybody to give me the full story on it," IU sports information director Tom Miller said by phone yesterday. "This was my understanding, that Notre Dame was trying to change the date because they didn't want to play two tough opponents like UCLA and Indiana in the same week."

John Heister, assistant SID at Notre Dame, said the Irish "officially" have the game on our schedule. It would be the first year of a two-year agreement, with next year at Bloomington. But it has not been signed because the dates are still in question.

Heister said the dates that Notre Dame originally had scheduled for UCLA and IU were Dec. 12 and 14, respectively, both at South Bend. But Notre Dame didn't like that arrangement and switched the UCLA game to Dec. 9 at LA, apparently eliminating any conflict in dates.

"The question now is next year," said Heister. "It's up to them (IU). They don't want to play when we want to." (Coaches) Digger Phelps and Bobby (Knight) couldn't agree on a date, so Bobby (the IU coach) apparently said, "forget it."

Earlier this week, Knight told an Indiana alumni dinner group at Ft. Wayne that this season's game with the Irish had been canceled, but he wouldn't elaborate.

Knight did confirm that 8-foot-9 junior forward Glen Grunwald will miss the entire season will leg problems. "Hopefully, we'll have him for two more seasons," Knight said.

Back when Jim Novitsky was a tennis star at Murray State University, his teammates had a name for him. "They called me the man," Novitsky said. "Because I was a cocky."

Yesterday at the Louisville Tennis Center, he applied the name to Aladdin Mitha, his opponent in a men's singles quarterfinal of the Metro Tennis Classic.

Mitha wasn't pleased. "He started calling me obscenities," Mitha said, "which I don't appreciate at all."

Novitsky, who wound up losing 6-3, 6-4, said that he hadn't meant to be obscene... that the name was intended to refer to Mitha's demeanor, which he felt was cocky.

Unfortunately, the communication gap couldn't be bridged. Finally, with Mitha leading the second set 3-4, a confrontation developed. Mitha, ahead 40-0 in the 10th game, tossed the ball up as if to serve. Instead of swinging at it, however, he let it drop.

"One of the players on the court beside us was moving toward Jim," Mitha said. "I hit the ball, Jim would have asked for a let."

Novitsky claimed that Mitha had faulted.

"If you swing the racket and you miss the ball, then it's a fault," Mitha said later. "I didn't make any attempt to hit it."

Soon as Novitsky called the fault, Mitha asked bystanders to summon a tournament official. "Get the tournament referee or the director of the tournament," Mitha said.

When tournament referee Helene Gorman arrived on the scene, Mitha said, "I'd like to lodge a complaint. My opponent has been calling me the foulest names I can think of. When I'm serving controversy, Gorman ruled in his favor.

"You can look it up in the rule book," Mitha told a reporter after the match. Mitha, a quiet, 27-year-old teaching pro at Big Spring Country Club, was shaken by the controversy. "It's ridiculous," he said as he relaxed on a bench. "I know he's a good player, and he knows I'm a good player. I've played all over the world. It's childish for him to try to pull a stunt like that. It was triple match point. Why would I want to do anything silly then?"

Novitsky, 31, a teaching pro at Louisville Indoor Racquet Club, initially refused to talk to a reporter. "No interview," he said as he walked away. "What's the difference? He's the winner, go talk to him. He knows it all."

Moments later, however, Novitsky had cooled off somewhat. "I'm a nice guy off the court," he said. "But when you're on the court, it's like Connors says: It's a different ball game. You've got to have that killer instinct, and today I didn't have it."

Because he didn't, Mitha was able to rally from a 4-0 deficit in the second set. "I lost my concentration," said the bearded Novitsky. "I don't get a chance to play enough during the week. I teach during the day and then work the night shift at the Ford truck plant (where he's a quality-control inspector)."

"I get home at 2:30 in the morning, get up at 8, then teach four or five hours. I leave the tennis club at about 4 and start work (at the truck plant) at 4:30. It's tough, but you've got to make a living some way. The name he called Mitha was nothing vulgar. I would never do anything like that." He admitted, however, that Mitha — and a gallery of about 50 — might have misunderstood him.

"Five years ago, when I was younger and wilder, I would have gone over the net and had a fight with him," said Mitha, who was born in Uganda — but raised in England. "But the only fight is supposed to be beating the man on the court — and doing it in a gentlemanly manner."

Mitha, who is unseeded, said he had no reason to expect any trouble from the seventh-seeded Novitsky. "I spoke to him on the phone last night," Mitha said. "I wanted to play the match earlier in the day (it was scheduled for 1:30 but began a bit later), but he said he had to work and couldn't change it."

"I wanted to play it at 10 so I could get back and teach from 12 to 2. As a result, I had to cancel two clinics — one of them had 18 or 20 girls in it — and those are where you make your money."

That, however, wasn't what bothered Aladdin Mitha. "I asked him to stop calling me names," Mitha said, "and he turns around and says, 'Okay, you —'"

In another quarter-final, Jamie Howell was leading fellow teaching pro Sunny Garner 1-6, 6-0, 4-1 when Garner quit after a disputed line call. "It was called out, and Howell thought it was in," tournament director Rick Kincaid said.

The day's upsets came in the women's 21 singles, where Amy Dougherty defeated top-seeded Laura Martin 6-3, 6-3 in a semifinal, and the men's 35 singles, where No. 3 Gene Schrage lost a quarter-final to unseeded Chuck Thompson 6-0, 8-4.

The tournament will be televised by Channel 13 from 1:3 p.m. today and 2 p.m. Sunday.

Evert gains, King tumbles in semifinals

Chris Evert dropped a set but still defeated Australia's Wendy Turnbull 3-6, 6-1, 6-4 and Martina Navratilova beat Billie Jean King 6-4, 6-2 yesterday in the semifinals of England's Eastbourne International tennis tournament.

The final today may well be a preview of the women's final at Wimbledon, in which Evert and Navratilova are seeded Nos. 1 and 2, respectively.

A swirling wind that continually changed direction upset Evert in the first set of her match with Turnbull, then she went one down in the second but regained her composure just in time.

Navratilova, on the other hand, said the wind did not bother her at all and both girls said afterwards they are looking forward to Wimbledon — which starts next week — with confidence.

"It seems to me I'm peaking perfectly," said Navratilova. "Last year I was overconfident but this year I'm much more consistent."

"I'm beginning to get nervous, and that is a good thing," said Evert. "I haven't been feeling this way for some time. When I'm not nervous I get lazy."

Turnbull, a 25-year-old wife called "rabbit" because she is so fast on grass, seemed initially to be on the way to the first major upset of the tournament when she took the opening set 6-3 against Evert, who was unsettled in the bustling conditions.

Evert felt behind 0-1 on Turnbull's service in the second set but the turning point of the match came in the next game. Evert nearly dropped it. She had advantage against her twice but finally — after a grim battle — pressured the Australian into overdriving and then sent her scuttling back vainly after a lob.

That battle over, Evert streaked ahead. In the next four games she allowed Turnbull only four points, breaking her twice, then finished the set off 6-1 with her third break.

QUEEN'S CLUB — Play finally was halted by heavy rains with fourth-seeded John McEnroe of the United States leading fellow American Tom Gullikson 3-2 in the third and final set of a quarter-final match. Gullikson took the first set 6-4 after two lengthy stoppages.

Named playing manager of pro team

Bourbons make new pitch to Schroer

By JOEL BIERIG
Staff Writer
The new manager of the Kentucky Bourbons professional softball team is Phil Schroer.

PHIL SCHROER
Now manages his teammates

"He's a good man," said Larry Gatti, one of the team's three owners. "He's been playing softball a long time, and he's a coach at the school he teaches at. He's very knowledgeable in the field of softball."

The Bourbons yesterday named Schroer, their No. 1 pitcher, to replace Bob Hildenbrand as field manager. Gatti, who fired Hildenbrand on Thursday because of a "communication gap," said he would handle the general manager's duties himself.

"I asked Phil about it last week, and he said he wanted to think about it," school took a lot of patience," Schroer said yesterday. "Well, this might take even more."

Schroer, who leads the team in hitting with a .414 average, will continue to pitch and play a few games at second base. "I've got pretty good people at my side in (coaches) Dave Burke and Steve Coffman," Schroer said. "I'll place a lot of confidence in them, and hope they keep their eyes and ears open while I'm out on the field."

Said Gatti: "He knows what he's coming into. I asked him how he would feel about managing some of his buddies. And he said, 'I have a business to run. If my buddies are truly my buddies, they'll be the first ones to help.'"

The new manager said he hopes he and his teammates "can develop a good relationship from a player-manager standpoint. I feel they'll expect me, like any manager to be fair. I think they're looking for a guy who'll be willing to go to bat for them. I'll respect them all as ball players and try to treat them as professionals."

The Bourbons, who won the Central Division championship last year under Hildenbrand's guidance, got off to a 1-7 start this year. Entering tonight's doubleheader at Milwaukee, they're 8-10, although only one game out of first place.

Schroer said he plans no roster changes but added that he "might try a couple of different things as far as positions and batting order are concerned. I'd like to see what Craig Milburn can do, and Dave Blair is a luxury in that he can play more than one position. I'd like to be able to find a spot for him."

Roller skating regionals set; Reibel faces tough schedule around the town

The Southern Regionals of the U.S. Amateur Roller Skating Championships will be held Sunday through Tuesday at Champ's Rollerdom in the Canelot shopping center.

Some 600 roller skaters from Kentucky, Tennessee, South Carolina, Georgia, Mississippi, Alabama and Florida will compete for places in the national championships in artistic and speed qualifications.

The artistic events are slated for Sunday through Tuesday and speed competition Wednesday and Thursday. All sessions will be open to the public.

Among the competitors will be Robby Coleman, the 15-year-old roller-rink star from Memphis, Tenn. Coleman began competing when she was seven and has won national championships in every age classification, from primary to senior.

In Louisville, she will be skating with her partner, Pat Jones, also of Memphis. The Coleman-Jones team finished second in the freestyle pairs at the 1977 World Championships in Montreal. They're hoping to qualify for the national championships at Lincoln, Neb., in late July and early August under the sponsorship of the U.S. Amateur Confederation of Roller Skating.

Observers are hoping that roller skating will be contested at the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles. If so, the winners at Louisville may become part of the U.S. roller skating team.

"These factors make the 1978 regionals here the most important in our history," said Joe Champ, operator of Champ's and the meet director.

BASKETBALL — "For the first time since I have been at Bellarmine, we will be competing against Division II opponents early," said Joe Reibel, who will be entering his eighth year as head coach at the Louisville college next fall.

Bellarmine's 1978-79 schedule includes one National Collegiate Athletic Association Division I school — Morehead State — and 17 Division II foes. Fifteen games will be played at Knights Hall and 11 on the road.

Nov. 25-26 — Bellarmine Tipoff Tourney (Augusta, Ga.); Lincoln Memorial, Bellarmine; 30 — at St. Joseph's;
Dec. 4-5 — at Georgetown; 7 — Eastern Illinois; 8 — Transylvania; 16 — Indiana Central; 19 — Morehead State; 21 — at Spqr's;
Jan. 3 — at Youngblood State; 9 — Indiana State; 11 — at Ohio State; 12 — Kentucky Wesleyan; 23 — Northern Kentucky; 25 — Campbellsville; 26 — at Thomas More; 29 — at Eastern Illinois; 31 — at DePauw;
Feb. 5 — Kentucky State; 7 — at Kentucky Wesleyan; 14 — Wright State; 18 — at Indiana State; Evansville; 17 — Transylvania; 22 — at Thomas More; 24 — at Transylvania; 27 — at Indiana Central.

GOLF — Rick Barger Jr., Mike Lenahan, Bill Parr, Vaughan Jones and Jodie Mudd are among the favorites in the 36-hole USGA Publiks qualifying tourney at Long Run Golf Course, set for today and Sunday. Three players will qualify for the National Publiks Championship at Bangor, Maine, July 10-15.

Barger was co-champion of this spring's Kentucky high school tourney and Lenahan played on Trinity's state championship team. Parr, Jones and Mudd are former national qualifiers.

It's no drag . . . 'Shakedown' shakes up racing greenhorn

By BILL DOOLITTLE
Courier-Journal & Times Correspondent

The first sound you hear is a tiny hum when Doug McMackin flicks a switch on the dashboard of his 1969 Mustang. But this isn't just any nine-year-old car. It's a super-stock drag racing machine, built by Doug and his brother John McMackin of Louisville. For a sizzling hot race, he has never been in a drag racing car, the whirring noise just heightens the anticipation of what is coming next.

It is Thursday night, and Doug McMackin is giving a new transmission in the car a light shakedown, and at the same time providing a new thrill for a couple of reporters.

McMackin turns a key, and instantly the electric fuel injection (the whirring noise) feeds the $6,000 Ford Cobra power plant what it craves: 428 cubic inches of engine muscle blast into action.

At an idle speed, the big engine cracks along in a loathing rhythm, each whirring explosion of the eight cylinders definable to the ear.

McMackin's dragster is entered in racing programs tonight and Sunday afternoon at Ohio Valley Raceway, 15 miles south of the Waterson Expressway on Dixie Highway at Katherine Station Road. McMackin's car is just one of many types of dragsters, from stocks to top fuel, which will be competing this weekend in one of the International Hot Rod Association's eight National Point-to-Point meets. Qualifying goes on all day today, with competition beginning about 7 p.m. On Sunday gates open at 10 a.m., with eliminations in the top national classes for 2 p.m.

McMackin slowly rolls the car in a light turn, coming full-around to point down the 1/4-mile asphalt strip at Ohio Valley. Straight ahead is a long blue gray road divided by a yellow line, with guard rails on each side. Away in the distance is a flat field with trees on the far horizon.

"This is going to be a very short trip, in a very, very short amount of time," McMackin says. "We're only going to get up to about 95 miles per hour," says McMackin, casually. Then he gives the car a couple short forward blasts to heat up the rubber on the 20-inch-wide rear tires.

At the starting line, the car is pitched slightly forward in a moment's pause. Then, suddenly, we leap away from the line, the torque pushing us back against the seat, and there is a tremendous distinction in its beat, no gravel in its voice.

The view stays stationary in front, except it comes right at you, a Cinemascope propelling your eyes towards a nearby horizon. And just as you see it, as it comes into focus and a subtle shift of gears settles you into a flying glide... just then, it is over.

The few seconds seemed even briefer than they were, and the distance covered seemed as if it couldn't have been an eighth of a mile.

As McMackin brakes the car the tension is released and you realize you have only breathed one breath.

We make the same kind of run back toward the starting point. With a grin the hitchhiker pops out and discovers his feet are tingling as he stands on the pavement.

On another run, the sounds gain identity: an exploding blast of a sound for those spectators behind the start; and then when McMackin turns and comes at you from the far end of the strip, it is a new sound you hear. From the distance, after you see the car come up and come on, you hear a higher pitched "whoosh" tone of power, the engine's full-throated voice.

After one ride, there is no longer any wonder what intoxicates a man so much he would want to go from a standing start to 187 miles per hour in six seconds.

Dunigan leads wire-to-wire; Dominion Frost also wins

Special to The Courier-Journal

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Dunigan became the first 2-year-old to cover a mile in two minutes at the Red Mile's spring meeting when the son of Meadow Skipper led from wire-to-wire in winning the second division of the $38,774 Kentucky Sires Stakes colt race last night.

Unless in three previous outings at the Meadowlands in East Rutherford, N.J., Dunigan posted fractions of 31.1, 1:00.4 and 1:31, then covered the final two furlongs in 29 seconds for a clocking of 2:00 flat.

He paid $21, $7 and $4.80. Second place Bret's Class returned $3.40 and $2.80, and Bret Who was $3.60 to show.

Dominion Frost, who didn't figure in pre-race speculation, certainly figured at the conclusion of the first division of the stakes.

The 2-year-old son of Bret Hanover won in 201 by a length over Plat Du Jour with Truth third. The pre-race favorite Social Outcast, who was never far off the early pace, wound up fifth.

Trainer-driver Doug McIntosh kept Dominion Frost near the lead, racing second at the opening quarter of :30.4, fourth at the 1:00 1/2 mark, and moved for the lead in the final turn. At the top of the stretch Dominion Frost drew the top and never looked back. The winner, who was purchased for $28,500 at the 1977 Tattersalls Yearling Sale by the Erie Shores Stable of Wheatley, Ontario, returned $13.60, 7.20, 5.40. Plat du Jour paid $6.60 and 6.20 while Truth was $5.50 to show.

The victory pushes Dominion Frost's earnings to $8,383. The juvenile's next Kentucky Sires Stakes engagement will be July 3rd at Louisville Downs.

Sea Royalty up in time to win Downs feature

From AP and Special Dispatches

Veteran Jimmy Nichols moved Sea Royalty to the outside for the stretch run and the 4-year-old daughter of Native Royalty just got up in time to win the $9,500 Hor Grace Purse by a head yesterday at Churchill Downs.

Cheerful Princess, the lukewarm favorite in the field of 11 3- and 4-year-old fillies, held on for second money for Matinee Mama, the pacesetter to the top of the stretch, was third.

Nichols scored his second win of the day and 10th of the meeting in beating

Sea Royalty home in 1:11 flat for the six furlongs. Sea Royalty returned $15.40, $8.80 and $4.40 to her backers among the crowd of 7,552. Cheerful Princess paid $3.20 and $2.40 and Matinee Mama $3.20.

Jim McKnight registered his 47th win of the meeting when he won the third race with Mad Bush. He is tied with Julio Espinoza for riding honors.

Jerry Santage brought Dancing Ignite home a winner in the sixth race for the meet's largest win payoff — $258.20 for a $2 bet.

Stakes, will carry 118 in her return from Ak-Sar-Ben.

With six in-the-money finishes in seven starts this year, Bold Rendezvous is the early favorite. She ran third in the Fleur de Lis, weakening after six furlongs and losing to Likely Exchange and Time for Pleasure.

Trainer Jim Morgan has decided to put Anthony Rini up in place of Paul Nicolo, who rode Bold Rendezvous to three-place finishes last week and in the Kentucky Oaks.

A strong field of nine 3-year-old fillies, including B. Thoughtful, Greenzen and Equanimity, carrying 121 pounds each, will contest the 1 1/8-mile, $100,000-added Hollywood Oaks at Hollywood Park.

B. Thoughtful won by eight lengths in her last start, the 1 1/8-mile Princess Stakes at Hollywood June 10. Greenzen was badly beaten in the May 27 Acorn at Belmont but won the Santa Ynez and Santa Susana at Santa Anita. Equanim-

Ellis Park expecting better horses

By JIM BOLUS
 Courier-Journal & Times Staff Writer

With a hefty increase in purse money, Ellis Park director of racing Donnie Richardson expects a substantial improvement in the quality of horses that will be competing at the Henderson, Ky., track's summer meeting, which opens next Friday.

"The overall quality will probably be 50 percent better than it's ever been," Richardson said.

Richardson said a primary reason for attracting better horses is Ellis Park's expanded stakes program. He noted that Ellis will run 13 stakes races at its 53-day meeting (June 30-Sept. 4). Last year Ellis ran only five stakes, according to Richardson.

Richardson said that $205,000 will be put into the Ellis stakes program, including $140,000 coming from a new state fund designed to upgrade the level of racing at the track.

Ellis will launch its meeting in a big way with stakes races on three of its first four days. Each of these three stakes will be a six-furlong sprint with a purse of $15,000 added.

The opening-day feature is the Inaugural Handicap for 3-year-olds and up. Twenty-five horses were nominated to the race, including Inca Rosa, Naughty Jake, Mr. Barb, Best Person, Tinsley's Hope and Faneuil Boy.

The feature on July 1 is the Brentwood Handicap for 3-year-olds. Among the nominees to this race are Special Honor, the longest winner of the Ohio Derby last Sunday; Grandeeza, World Emperor, Guilford H. and Braze and Bold.

On July 4, Ellis will stage the Constitution Handicap for fillies and mares, 3-year-olds and up. Nominees to this race include Likely Exchange, winner of the $21,475 Fleur de Lis Handicap at Churchill Downs last Saturday. What Reason, owned by race car driver A. J. Foyt; Irish Aglet; Legit; Stimmis; Welsing; Bold Lightning; Famed Princess; Balls of Dodge Me, Plaka, Need a Dime and Joy's Pride.

Richardson said a stakes race will be run each Saturday of the meeting, as well as on the Sept. 5 Labor Day card.

The schedule calls for 12 of the 13 stakes to be valued at $15,000 added, with one — the Governor's Handicap on Aug. 12 — will carry a $25,000-added purse.

Richardson said that newcomers in the Ellis trainers' ranks will include Joe Petalio, Art Vocam, Earl Puckett, John Fischer, Dennis Freking and E. P. Caplan.

Richardson added that David Vance, with a division of Dan Laszler's stable, will be returning to Ellis after a long absence.

Improvements at Ellis Park include a new aluminum rail and a new 32-stall barn, Richardson noted.
