Lecture to Navy Intelligence School on CIG Organization

1. In recent conversation with an ONI officer who had just delivered a lecture to the Navy Intelligence School, he informed me that after his lecture he was asked by a number of the students for information relative CIG organization and functions. He said that to those students CIG seemed to be a phantom, as they had seen no published functions or results of its work.

2. I recommend, in keeping with our previous conversation on this subject, that [redacted] be assigned to deliver an up-to-date lecture on CIG organization and functions to all of the agency intelligence schools. Such a lecture would be most beneficial to CIG in formulating a good and proper opinion among the working personnel, rather than force them to pick up loose and unauthentic bits in conversation.
