2. They both feel additionally that we stand a fair chance to utilize the capability if we are able to develop it. Although I do not share their present optimism, I quote to you the conclusion of Colonel Giller's paper to me:

"You are instructed to give very heavy priority to the development of any and all countermeasures suitable to our overflight program."

3. I have informally been advised that USAF is also working on the question of a [REDACTED]. I sincerely trust that we are not duplicating their effort and that you are carefully investigating USAF sources so that proper coordination can be maintained in order to facilitate expeditious development of the equipment at minimum cost to the tax payer.
