REMARKS

Agree with the interviewer that [REDACTED] gives an extremely good impression and appears to have both drive and ability. I had a strong feeling during my interview that he is no longer particularly interested in straight legal work. He seems to feel perfectly confident about his legal competence and his training in the law is good, but his description of how he shifted from law to management gave me the feeling that he preferred the latter type of work. He would fit in the Agency in many places, but I think his training particularly suits him for some of the case officer positions where practical business experience and legal background are great assets.
