1. It is my understanding that under present arrangements the [REDACTED] is exploiting Chinese Mainland press for the immediate benefit of the COUNSUL General and his staff and to meet requirements from the Department of State. The State Department is not transmitting to the reading service the requirements of other agencies.

2. It is also my understanding that these same newspapers, upon receipt by FDD, are exploited to meet requirements from CIA and the other agencies, excepting the State Department.

3. It would be appreciated if CIA/FDD would consult with the State Department to see whether it would be more efficient to have the non-State Department requirements applied [REDACTED] in order that those same newspapers do not need to be rehandled at Headquarters by FDD. Such an arrangement, if possible, would have the benefit of an earlier or more prompt availability of the information in such newspapers for the community.

4. (My own hunch is that (a) the Department won't have the personnel to do this and (b) even if they do, in regard to the material that ORR wants, the time element is not important because ORR is not a current intelligence organization; (c) it will be shown that FDD would have to go over the material anyway for requirements such as for the DDP, since the total load would be too much
