CONGRESSIONAL RECORD—HOUSE

tongue in cheek proceeded to recommend that the Sooners be decorated for bravery for daring to meet the Tennessee Volunteers in a football contest. In fact, he said he was sending our team copies of the book, "Profiles in Courage," in recognition of their football bravery.

Mr. Speaker, every Oklahoman now has an added reason to look forward to the Orange Bowl classic, and the moment of truth which follows.

With characteristic Tennessee modesty, Congressman BLANTON has claimed that the Volunteers are "the No. 1 football team in the Nation," and appears to believe that makes their victory a sure thing.

The Sooner team has been dealing with this brand of blissful overconfidence all season, and likes nothing better than moving up the ladder of national rankings over the battered remains of overconfident opponents.

The Orange Bowl, which in fact provides a battle between the two college teams generally ranked as No. 2—Tennessee—and No. 3—Oklahoma—is almost certain to provide the best college football game on your television screen January 1.

Oklahomans are looking forward to the battle, and thousands of them will be in the Orange Bowl for the moment of truth.

If the Volunteers should perform the unbelievable feat of winning, we in the Oklahoma delegation are prepared to serve our Tennessee colleagues a quail dinner when we return to Washington.

We hope our Tennessee colleagues are prepared to extend a similar invitation, in the more likely event that the Sooners are the winners.
