STUDENTS RESIST EVICTION BY C.I.A.

Group That Got Funds From Agency Pays No Rent

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, June 24— Leaders of the National Student Association said today that they were resisting efforts by the Central Intelligence Agency to evict the association from its rent-free headquarters here.

The association, the country's largest college student organization, for the last two years has occupied a four-story building at 2115 S Street Northwest under a 15-year rent-free lease with the Independence Foundation of Boston.

The foundation has been identified as one of several that secretly channeled Central Intelligence Agency funds to the National Student Association from the early nineteen-fifties until last year.

Officers of the association disclosed the aid last February and announced that all ties with the Federal Agency had been ended.

Called Airtight Contract

The association president, W. Eugene Groves, said that lawyers for the association were negotiating with the C.I.A. over the agency's request that the building be vacated.

He said the association regarded the 15-year rent-free lease as a grant made to it under "an airtight legal contract."

"We are not about to give up an asset given to us two years ago," he remarked.

In the negotiations now under way, he reported, the association is exploring the possibility of ownership of the building being transferred either to itself or to some other entity—"open

Town Keeps Tradition Of Ties for Main Office

MAYBEE, Mich. (AP)— Maybee made up its mind with the annual ordeal in indecision.

In the campaign for president of the village 30 miles south of Detroit, some residents liked Carl Rupp. Others liked John Biccum. The vote: Rupp 42, Biccum 42.

But that is the way it goes in Maybee.

It was Mr. Biccum vs. Mr. Rupp in 1961. Mr. Biccum vs. Mr. Rupp in 1962. In fact, it has been Mr. Biccum vs. Mr. Rupp for the last seven elections, all nonpartisan, with Mr. Rupp winning by two votes in one year, Mr. Biccum by two in another.

In this year's election, Mr. Rupp won by two votes again on the first count, but a recount produced a tie. The winner, Mr. Rupp got the post by picking the winning slip from a hat.

and free from any conceivable ties with the agency."

A C.I.A. spokesman said the agency had no comment on the matter.

Wine Expert in Australia Toasts 'Red on the Rocks'

SYDNEY, Australia (AP)— Thomas Hardy, an Australian wine expert, says the favorite drink at his home is "red on the rocks."

"Some wine snobs would say it was sacrilegious to drink wine with ice," said Mr. Hardy, president of the Australian Wine and Brandy Producers' Association, to a group of newsmen.

"I wouldn't, of course, do it with a classic table wine. But for an average red wine I think it is a happy way to drink."
