25X1 15. [redacted] Determined that Mr. Tom McEvoy, presently on the staff of Senator Joseph Tydings, was the individual who had initiated the letter to the Director [redacted]. I also learned that the Senator was not aware of the constituent inquiry that prompted Mr. McEvoy to write the letter. After very light discussion with Mr. McEvoy, it was determined that a meeting with Senator Tydings on this would not be necessary. However, Mr. McEvoy was assured that should the Senator become interested in this, we would be glad to go over the matter with him personally.

25X1 16. [redacted] Senator Leverett Saltonstall called to advise that he and Senator Russell were going to make floor statements today on the current resolution before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Senator Saltonstall wished me to drop by his office to go over a few points. This I did. He merely wanted to review certain points that he planned to make during his short speech. I saw no problem with any of the points although his actual floor statement covered many other topics.

25X1 17. [redacted] At the request of the Director, there was left with Mr. Darden, Senate Armed Services Committee staff, a copy of the Agency's internal analysis of the New York Times series. I explained to Mr. Darden the background and that his responsibility was solely to be custodian because of special classification of certain parts.

25X1 18. [redacted] What apparently had been planned as very short remarks by Senators Russell and Saltonstall on the floor turned into a full-fledged two-hour debate. Speaking against the resolution in Senate Foreign Relations were Senators Russell, Stennis, Saltonstall, Symington, Milton Young, Lausche, and Holland, briefly. Those answering were Fulbright and McCarthy.
