Chief of CIA Says We Reveal Too Much

WASHINGTON (INS) — important for our government that we all succeed in that. We are not satisfied with the coverage at the present time and are trying constantly to improve it."

The warning came from Allen W. Dulles, director of the highly secret Central Intelligence Agency.

He said even the government furnished the Soviet Union with information. In a cautiously worded statement, he declared: "Sometimes I think we go too far in what our government gives out officially."

The usually close-mouthed Dulles, a brother of Secretary of State Dulles, said in a copyrighted interview in U. S. News and World Report that "I would give a good deal if I could know as much about the Soviet Union as the Soviet Union can learn about us by merely reading the (American) press."

Technical Data Published

He added: "We Americans published a great deal in our scientific and technical journals and in congressional hearings. And, of course, in our free system of government, what we do in the field of legislation for national defense is open to the public. * * *

"Sometimes I think we go too far in what our government gives out officially and in what is published in the scientific and technical field. We tell Russia too much."

But Dulles conceded there was little that could be done about it. He commented that "under our system, it is hard to control it."

Dulles, whose intelligence work covered World Wars I and II, said the Soviet espionage system is the best in the world, but he added that U. S. propaganda is having "a real effect" in Russian satellites.

Iron Curtain Tight

He described as "the toughest job intelligence has ever faced" the task of obtaining "good information" from behind the Iron Curtain.

He said: "It is, of course, very
