WASHINGTON, July 10—The "S.O.S. Club" is perhaps the least known, yet the most exclusive of Washington's many political organizations.

Only 15 belong to it. All are Republican members of the House of Representatives, 41 years old or younger, and serving their first term in Congress.

The Morse code initials SOS stand as a symbol of the club's purpose. Members are supposed to come to each other's aid and assistance. Some of the Congressmen's secretaries, however, jokingly refer to S.O.S. as Society of Statesmen.

The group formed back in April, 1953, when several freshmen GOP House members decided it would be a good idea to combine and give one another a helping hand.

LEFT ENTIRELY alone, many a newly-elected Congressman becomes lost and confused in Washington's maze of political snagging, seniority rights, parliamentary procedure and never-ending corridors.

Twice a week these Young Republicans assemble to swap mutual problems, discuss legislation and generally keep abreast of political and governmental activities. One of the sessions takes place over breakfast and prominent figures are invited to talk informally to the club.

Many cabinet members have thus chatted to the group at these early morning gatherings, including Secretary of State Dulles, Secretary of Defense Wilson, Secretary of Agriculture Benson and Secretary of the Treasury Humphrey.

When Allen Dulles, director of the Central Intelligence Agency, was invited to join the club for breakfast at the Capitol he pulled a surprising switch. Everyone was asked to come over to the mystery shrouded C. I. A., for Dulles wanted to brief the club with all the maps and charts available at his agency.

Just recently the "S. O. S. Club" went to the White House at the crack of dawn to have scrambled eggs and bacon with the President. The Administration is well aware of the importance of this small segment of Republican Representatives.

In certain circles they are known as "Ike's Ramrods," for on the whole they have strongly backed the President's legislative program. This is despite the fact that the club has in no way pledged to go down the line for the administration.

Here is the roll call of the "S.O.S. Club":

JOHN J. RHODES, Arizona; Joe Holt, Craig Hosmer and Bob Wilson, California; Herbert B. Warburton, Delaware; D. Bailey Merrill, Indiana; Peter Frelinghuysen Jr., New Jersey; Jeffrey P. Hillelson, Missouri; Stuyvesant Wainwright, New York; Clinton

Young, Nevada; Elford A. Cederberg and Alvin M. Bentley, Michigan; Oliver P. Bolton, Ohio; Douglas R. Stringfellow, Utah, and Melvin R. Laird, Wisconsin.

The entire S.O.S. roster will be on the ballot in the coming November elections. This makes the future of the club extremely uncertain, but its objectives have already been fulfilled. For by helping each other these Congressmen have been able to tackle their far more understanding and confidence.
