1. Programmed Instruction. I met with Matt Baird, John Richardson, [REDACTED] and three of the latter's colleagues from ORD to consider the approach the Agency should take with respect to programmed instruction. After discussing our experience to date in this field, we agreed that a comprehensive study should be made of the possible applications which programmed instruction may have to many of the Agency's activities. As a prerequisite to launching such a study, I asked [REDACTED] and Matt, with assistance from John, to prepare a specific plan for the study showing what it will cover and how it will be done, and setting target dates and reporting periods for each phase. I made it clear that the focal point for our efforts in this field, both now and in the future, should continue to be the Office of Training.
