CIA-AFME-OAS-Woe!

QUITE a series of conduits for public funds apparently have been used by the CIA (Central Intelligence Agency) to subsidize, perhaps even to influence, various organizations with little or no known success. Actually, the CIA can take public credit neither for its successes nor for its failures. That's pretty tough, of course. But one would hope at least that the nation's top agency in our national intelligence community would not allow itself to be outsmarted. That's not showing much intelligence at all! But that's exactly what has happened with the CIA channelling your tax dollars to the so-called American Friends of the Middle East (AFME), a pro-Arab propaganda outfit—and, either directly or indirectly, to the virtually subversive Organization of Arab Students (OAS), whose studious homework has been anti-Israel, anti-American policy propaganda. So, it seems the newest covert-overt conduit is CIA-AFME-OAS —Woe! Or, should it be "Whoa!?"
