ADMIRAL WILLIAM RAYBORN INTERVIEWED

COPYRIGHT

ALLEN JACKSON: "Join the CIA and be a hotshot secret agent. Well it's not all quite like that, and you have the word of a former boss of the Intelligence outfit, Admiral William Rayborn. He was interviewed on the subject by the magazine US News & World Report, and said that actually, only a few CIA personnel take part in clandestine activities. He said the CIA man has far less chance of serving in a James Bond spy role than he does of serving as an academic researcher, economist, scientist, statistician, administrator, accountant or a supply officer. And that hardly sounds like the kind of excitement that appeals to the armchair spy fan."
