QUOTE HANS TOFTE

DAVID RUSH: "A Central Intelligence Agency official says somebody took several thousand dollars worth of jewels from his Georgetown home two weeks ago. The agent, Hans Tofte, had listed his house for sale. Reportedly, the CIA sent in another agent under the guise of being a prospective buyer. The agent browsed his way through Tofte's house and allegedly noted a number of classified papers laying in the open.

:Later, CIA agents made another visit to the Tofte house and took the documents into custody. But now Tofte has made a counter charge. He says the agents -- since the agents returned to his house, the documents aren't all that disappeared -- several thousand dollars worth of jewelry, according to the home owner.

"Federal and city authorities are investigating."
