1. [redacted] Robert Blum, Research Assistant, Senate Foreign Relations Committee, visited Headquarters to see the Cuban Missile Crisis display in response to a long-standing invitation. His present expectation is that he will stay on with the Committee through the summer to oversee the publication of executive session hearings of the Foreign Relations Committee beginning with the Truman period. Approval for publication was granted by the full Committee and request will be made to the Senate for necessary funding. Blum told me also that he had been involved in a few limited areas with the staff of the Multi-National Corporation Subcommittee but he does not expect to have any future involvement with that Subcommittee and its work.
