6. [redacted] In the vault of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, read the Senator Howard H. Baker, Jr. (R., Tenn.) summary of his Watergate-related investigation of CIA. George Murphy, Joint Committee on Atomic Energy staff, said that access to the report so far had been limited to Senator Sam J. Ervin, Jr. (D., N. C.), [redacted] and myself, and there shouldn't be anything in the report that would surprise me and there wasn't. The summary is not balanced, is replete with selective omissions and undue emphasis, and for the most part easily rebuttable. Realizing that I think the summary is pretty thin, Murphy later in the day told me that he would like to report my reaction to Baker with the idea that I would come down again to point out any obvious mistakes. I said I wouldn't want any such review to be misunderstood as agreement with the substance, which I certainly do not, but that I would point out glaring factual errors. Senator Ervin has now read the report and Murphy believes, but is not sure, that this may be tantamount to Committee approval for transmittal to Senators John C. Stennis (D., Miss.) and John L. McClellan (D., Ark.).

7. [redacted] In his absence from the office, left a message for Don Elisburg, Subcommittee on Labor staff, Senate Committee on Labor and Public Welfare, concerning the status of our recommendation for the conference report on Age Discrimination rider to the Fair Labor Standards Act Amendments (S. 2747).

8. [redacted] In line with arrangements made by Mr. Thuermer, met for about one and one-half hours with Norm Sandler, Michael McNanee, and David Tenenbaum, MIT political science students who are doing a paper on Congressional oversight of CIA. They were bright, well read in, and asked good questions. They will attribute our comments to "intelligence officials." They had previously interviewed Guy McConnell, Senate Appropriations Committee.
