2. Met with [REDACTED] to discuss advances---which are in effect loans---to employees going to certain stations in [REDACTED]. It was agreed that we should continue to make such loans when it is necessary for these employees to take along substantial quantities of supplies, such as food and clothing, which are not available in this area. It was also agreed, however, that employees should render accountings for such loans prior to their departure from the field. We have an obligation on the one hand to insure that these individuals and their families have the necessities of life, and on the other to insure that we do not permit appropriated funds to be used for loans to finance the purchase of automobiles, pay off old debts, etc.
