Quotations in Moscow broadcasts occur in (a) ideological, political, pep and other talks, individual or serialized; (b) at anniversary dates of articles, works of speeches to which particular importance is attached as having had special influence on the development of events; (c) at random, whenever it suits the subject.

Quotations are taken:

1. from articles
2. from speeches delivered at special occasions (Party Congresses, meetings of the Soviets, Conference of Stakhanovites, Stalin's speech at the reception in the Kremlin in honor of the participants of the Victory Parade on 25 June 1945, etc.)
3. from specified works
4. from collected works (Vol. so-and-so, page so-and-so)
5. without a source being specifically mentioned ('Stalin pointed out that...' 'as Lenin said' or .../quotation/... /Stalin/).

Stalin and Lenin are predominant as sources of quotations. Other Soviet figures are seldom quoted, unless connected with an anniversary, special subject or trend of propaganda (Kalinin, at his death anniversary; Frunze's "Voprosy vysshego voyennogo obrazovaniya" /Quotations of higher military education/ and other articles and speeches at a celebration of a Military Academy; Gorky on America /'Gorod Zheltogo Dyavola' - The City of the Yellow Devil/, Mayakovsky 'Ob Amerike' /About America/; Michurin, on the transformation of nature). Marx and Engels are quoted comparatively rarely, though works of both are occasionally used as basis for talks.

The list of the most frequently quoted works is approximately the following:

Lenin

Chto delat? (What is to be done?)

Materializm i empiro-kritisizm (Materialism and Empirio-Criticism)

Imperializm, kak noveyshy etap kapitalizma (Imperialism, the last stage of capitalism)

Detskaya bolezn 'Levisny' v kommunizme ('Left-Wing' Communism, an infantile disorder)
