Dear John:

In a recent discussion of the [Redacted] laser printer between [Redacted] and me, it was concluded that the great potential and high cost of the instrument warranted that it be given some special attention. It seemed it would be appropriate to bring together some high-powered talent to conduct an intensive review of the study phase. The end of the study phase will be a critical juncture and a time of decision. George seemed to feel that good technical assistance at that point would be sound procedure. Enclosed are copies of a proposal to provide that assistance.

If you decide to act on this proposal, we will immediately start discussions with the people previously mentioned to you and send you their background resumes for approval. We also suggest you consider having one or two members of your staff (such as [Redacted] participate in the review. If it is in line with your wishes, it might be appropriate to have [Redacted] act as Task Director.
