ARTHUR C. LUNDAHL

BIOGRAPHIC SKETCH

Arthur Lundahl was born April 1, 1915, in Chicago, Illinois. He grew up in the immediate environs of Chicago, and attended the University of Chicago from 1934 to 1942.

In 1942, Mr. Lundahl was commissioned an Ensign, USNR, and received training as a photo interpreter. He saw wartime service as a P.I. in the United States and the Northern Pacific.

At the end of the war, Mr. Lundahl converted to Navy civilian status at his last duty station, and remained working at the U.S. Naval Photographic Interpretation Center, Washington, D. C. from 1946 through 1953. From 1946 to 1947 he was the Chief of the Photogrammetry Division. From late 1947 through 1953 he served as Assistant Chief Engineer, the Center's second most senior civilian position.

In 1953, Mr. Lundahl joined the Central Intelligence Agency and organized the Agency's first photo interpretation capability. In early 1961, by National Security Council direction, Mr. Lundahl's organization was redesignated the National Photographic Interpretation Center, and the Director of CIA, with the concurrence of the Secretary of Defense, appointed him its first Director. The National Photographic Interpretation Center is jointly manned by CIA and DIA personnel. It occupies a six-storied building in the Washington Navy Yard uniquely designed for imagery exploitation activities. It employs more than 1200 people. Arthur Lundahl is entering his eleventh year as its Director.

Mr. Lundahl is married, has two children, and lives in suburban Bethesda, Maryland.
