From [redacted] extensive additions had been made to the plant facilities. These included extension of the main building to almost twice the original size, construction of a side building, and the addition of two tall stacks rising from the ground and adjacent to the new section of the main building.

Despite the extensive alterations it was possible to identify the plant from objects and layout shown on the ground photo of [redacted]. The items used in the identification consisted of:

1. General shape and type of construction of main building.
2. Two fuel tanks adjacent to main building.
3. Tank farm in background.
4. Two buildings in background.
5. Double fence line in foreground.
