3. Emergency Travel Plan. The Emergency Travel Plan coverage described in the booklet, "Association Insurance Programs", dated 31 March 1960 has been expanded to include round-trip travel from any location in the world to points anywhere else in the world for emergencies that involve named persons in the application.

a. This concept recognizes that emergencies may occur which affect the employee or the employee's immediate family who are at the post with him. The employee can purchase Emergency Travel Insurance and name himself and/or the other family members with him at the post to provide for the contingency of emergency travel which may not qualify for payment by the Government. For example, the employee may become critically ill and be evacuated to our country or to Government medical facilities at an intermediate location. Normally, his travel expenses would qualify for payment under [redacted] however, the employee's wife would have to assume the travel cost as a personal expense if she wished to be with her husband unless she qualified as an attendant. Under the provisions of the Emergency Travel Plan if the employee is the first named he can designate his spouse as the person to make the trip. In the event he becomes critically ill and must be evacuated, his wife, relying on the insurance coverage, can accompany him. A similar use can be made of the Emergency Travel Plan if the emergency involves the family members at the post with the employee. By naming these family members and paying the additional premium, the employee can be assured of payment of travel expenses if he wishes to accompany a critically ill family member.
