NOTESPolice Slay Four Kraiselburd Defendants

Buenos Aires newspapers have reported that four of the suspects charged in the kidnaping and murder of U.S. citizen David Kraiselburd have been killed while attempting to escape from jail. [redacted] According to the press, the men were slain on 27 September by members of the provincial police when they tried to break out of prison in the city of La Plata. The fifth suspect in the case, a woman, is detained in a separate prison for women located outside of La Plata. [redacted]

Bolivian Tin Heiress Kidnaped

On 3 October two men kidnaped Graziella Ortiz-Patino, the five-year-old daughter of Bolivian tin millionaire Georges Ortiz-Patino, as she was departing for school in Geneva. The kidnapers hit the family chauffeur over the head with a blunt instrument and left the scene with the child in a car with Italian license plates. The two men were described as "Latin types." The police later found the car but have found no trace of the men. The child's mother has received a telephone call from a French-speaking man who said, "We have your little girl, keep the police and press out of this." The caller made no demands. Via Swiss television Ortiz-Patino appealed to the kidnapers not to harm his daughter and said the police have promised not to interfere. [redacted]

Members of 2 June Movement Indicted

Six members of Germany's 2 June Movement were indicted on 28 September for murder and kidnaping. The indictment, prepared by West Germany's federal prosecutor, covers the killing in November 1974 of Guenter von Drenkmann, the president of the Berlin Higher Court, and the abduction in February 1975 of Berlin Christian Democratic Union chairman Peter Lorenz. Lorenz was released after six days when five imprisoned anarchists were flown from Germany to Aden. A sixth prisoner, whose freedom had been demanded by the kidnapers, refused to leave jail. Czech Couple Hijacks Airliner

Two uniformed employees of Czechoslovak Airlines hijacked a short-haul jet on 11 October and forced it to fly to Frankfurt. The hijackers, 30-year-old Vlastimil Toupalik, an air traffic control inspector, and his 22-year-old companion, Ruzena Vlckova, employed at Prague's air terminal, boarded the flight in the western Czechoslovak resort town of Karlovy Vary. Shortly after takeoff the hijackers, brandishing handguns, ordered the pilot to go to Germany. After landing at Frankfurt, they refused to allow any of the other 24 passengers or three crewmen to leave the plane and demanded fuel for a flight to Munich, 180 miles to the southeast. About two hours later they dropped their demand and surrendered when officials convinced them that the special fuel needed for the YAK-40 jet was not immediately available. Soon after their surrender the plane was allowed to fly on to Prague, its original destination.

This is the sixth time since 1970 that Czechoslovaks have defected to West Germany by diverting a commercial airliner. The two hijackers in this incident asked for political asylum; however, Frankfurt police say they will be held on charges of "endangering airline transportation." On 12 October a formal demand for their extradition was delivered to the German ambassador in Prague. In the past, West German officials have refused to return air pirates to Czechoslovakia, but have required some to serve terms in German jails.

JRA Issues Public Statements

In the wake of its recent successful hijacking of a Japan Airlines plane, the Japanese Red Army (JRA) has issued statements via press outlets in various parts of the world. On 11 October, the Paris bureau of the Kyodo News Service received a letter from the JRA hijackers addressed to Japanese Prime Minister Takeo Fukuda. Earlier contacts with the press include another JRA letter published on 6 October by a leftist newspaper in Osaka, Japan, and an interview with a man claiming to have masterminded the hijacking, which was published by the Reuter news agency and datelined 5 October, Nicosia, Cyprus. A separate interview with another JRA representative was reported by Kyodo News Service in a dispatch distributed on 4 October.

The hijackers' letter to Prime Minister Fukuda stated that the Japanese government should accept complete defeat in the hijacking and threatened another JRA attack if the government "shamelessly" chased after the hijackers. The letter said the JRA would destroy the Japanese monarchical system and continue to strive for the establishment of a "people's republic" in Japan.

The JRA statement mailed to "The People's Journal" in Osaka also stressed the JRA's armed struggle against Japanese imperialism and implied there may be further "rescue operations" for colleagues still imprisoned in Japan. The letter stated that all those fighting against Japanese imperialism are comrades of the JRA, whether they be "penal offenders" or "political offenders."

In the Reuter interview, which took place in a Middle Eastern capital, a man using the name Yano Kenichi claimed to be a member of the JRA's Politbureau and to be the "brain behind the hijack." According to Kenichi, the JRA Politbureau consists of "less than a dozen members" and the entire JRA has less than 150 full-time members, most of whom are based in Japan. [REDACTED]

NOTES

New Letter from Schleyer Increases Concern for His Safety

A new letter has been received from kidnaped West German industrialist Hanns-Martin Schleyer. The handwritten letter, which FRG officials have determined is genuine, was received by two French newspapers and a Swiss news agency. It was accompanied by a photograph of Schleyer bearing the inscription, "imprisoned by the R.A.F. for 31 days."

Schleyer stated in the letter that time might be running out for the government to negotiate his release and urged the FRG to free the 11 prisoners as demanded by his kidnapers. West German authorities have maintained that they cannot find a country willing to accept the imprisoned terrorists after their release. Schleyer pointed out that this argument no longer seemed valid in view of Algeria's acceptance earlier this month of a group of Japanese Red Army hijackers and released Japanese prisoners following the seizure of a JAL aircraft. Schleyer wrote that he was convinced his kidnapers would not wait much longer.

Bomb Hoax Diverts Pan American Jet

On 4 October a Pan American Airlines 747 jet flying from San Francisco to Tokyo was forced to land at Vancouver, Canada. A note stating eight bombs were aboard was found in one of the plane's washrooms. The 288 passengers deplaned safely and officials searched the aircraft but no explosives were found. After an overnight delay the flight continued to Tokyo.

NOTES

Croats Convicted in Attack on Yugoslav UN Mission

On 12 October a Federal District Court jury in Manhattan found three Croatians guilty of conspiracy to seize and hold as hostage the Yugoslav ambassador to the United Nations.

[redacted] Marijam Buconjic, 28, of New Windsor, N.Y., Valdimir Dizdar, 23, of Chicago, and Joco Brekalo, 30, of St. Louis, could receive sentences of life imprisonment stemming from their armed invasion of the Yugoslav mission to the UN on 14 June. Dizdar was also convicted of shooting a chauffeur who was guarding the door to the mission when the defendants forced their way in. The three men barricaded themselves inside an office for two hours, and dropped leaflets into the street demanding independence for Croatia. Sentencing has been set for 17 November.

Graziella Ortiz-Patino, the five-year-old heiress to a Bolivian tin fortune, was freed by her kidnapers on 14 October. The child, who was abducted on 3 October [redacted] was released outside a motel at Etoy, on the north shore of Lake Geneva, Switzerland. After she was reunited with her family, the girl's father, Georges Ortiz-Patino, told the press that he believed his daughter had been drugged several times during her captivity. Asked to confirm that he had paid a ransom of U.S. $2 million, Ortiz-Patino said he would not comment on the amount because "it would incite other people to commit similar crimes."
