Dear Jerry.

My colleague,  has been ^{25X1} going over the last of the papers left in Allen Dulles's house with an eye to making a proper distribution of documents of a personal to confidential nature. The papers in this folder would seem to fall into those categories. We thought that the master of the Alibi Club should take custody. So here they are - as I just told you on the phone.

All kind thoughts - a lot of them,
Dear friend
Yours

MEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

SUBJECT: Disposition of Correspondence with North American Aviation Co., predecessor of Rockwell International, in Allen W. Dulles Personal Papers

1. Review of subject materials showed that they contained correspondence between Mr. Dulles and officers of North American Aviation, concerning a contractual or lawyer/client relationship established in 1964, after Mr. Dulles left government service. Most of the documents are dated 1964-1965, although some of the material extends to 1967. None of the material is CIA-related.

2. The file contains material on the establishment of a secure facility for the handling of defense information in Mr. Dulles' residence in Georgetown. This material is administrative in nature and not sensitive.

3. The file also contains a certain amount of information privileged to North American Aviation. For this reason it appears to be more appropriate to arrange for transmittal of the material to Rockwell International as a successor company.

4. Security folders in the file indicate that at one time it contained classified information, which was destroyed in accordance with industrial security procedures of the Department of Defense.

5. The file now consists of five folders, about three inches of material, all headed; North American Aviation, Inc., with subheadings as follows:

- A. North American Aviation, Inc. No subhead.
- B. Ditto, 1964.
- C. Ditto, T. Braun.
- D. Ditto, Security Materials.
- E. Ditto, "Security" Papers, 1964-65.

6. On the advice of the Industrial Branch, OS, it was arranged to transmit this material to Rockwell International, as the successor to North American Aviation, through [redacted] [redacted] Logistics Security.
