SOVIET FORCES IN CUBA

- I. The withdrawal of Soviet military personnel from Cuba continues. We estimate that at least 15,000-- and probably closer to 18,000--have been withdrawn since the missile crisis last year.
 - A. From the time of the crisis until mid-October this year, we found no verifiable evidence that more than a few hundred military personnel had arrived.
 - B. Since then, however, a limited program of rotation and replacement of Soviet military personnel has been in progress.

C. We believe that about 4 to 7 thousand Soviets remain in Cuba.

2. The remaining Soviets are military advisers and technicians training Cubans, and supervising the use and maintenance of equipment turned over to the Cubans.

III. As Cuban proficiency increases in the various weapon systems, further withdrawals of Soviet personnel will probably take place until only a military assistance and technical advisory establishment remains.
