return to normal in the course of the coming week if there are no new guerrilla actions to give the movement new impetus. As the domestic challenge eases at least temporarily, President Somoza will be increasingly concerned about growing international interest in the Nicaraguan situation.//
//Many businessmen hope that the strike can last through next Friday, but a few enterprises are already beginning to reopen and the month-and-a-half-long hospital workers' strike has apparently been settled. The end of the national work stoppage is being hastened by government countermeasures, business reluctance to incur major economic losses, and the virtual absence of guerrilla activities.//
//The fading of the strike will not deflect the opposition from its goal of ousting Somoza. Few oppositionists expected the strike to topple the government, and it never had clearly defined realistic objectives.//
//Moderate opposition leaders are concerned that Somoza's tenacity will encourage recourse to radical alternatives. Some moderates, consequently, may be more inclined than before the strike to begin tentative discussions with the government, but the opposition as a whole is not likely to change its basic position of "no dialogue."//
//The decline in the strike will boost Somoza's confidence, but he is concerned about the possibility of international involvement in his country. Venezuelan President Perez, Somoza's most active hemispheric critic, has asked for the Organization of American States to convene a meeting of foreign ministers to look into Nicaraguan developments. Costa Rican President Carazo is conferring with Honduras, El Salvador, and Guatemala about the possibility of offering Central American mediation to the opposing sides in Nicaragua.//

	SPAIN-CUBA: Official Visit
	Spanish Prime Minister Suarez arrives in Cuba today for a two-day official visit. The stop in Havana, following three days in Venezuela, is part of Spain's continuing effort to promote close ties with its former colonies; it does not signal a move closer to Communist countries. Conversations will focus primarily on economic matters.
	Suarez may also see a domestic political angle in the Cuban stopover, expecting that his reception in Havana will do no harm to his democratic-progressive credentials and will keep Socialist leader Gonzalez and Communist chief Carrillo from monopolizing ties with Havana. The visit may also assuage leftists unhappy with the announcement that King Juan Carlos will visit Argentina in November.

25X1	//On the other hand, the government's domestic position may suffer if the hijackers receive severe sentences. The public sees the hijackers as political refugees. The opposition parties will doubtless take a similar position, even though they generally favor a tough law-and-order stance.//
25X6
25X1	//Chancellor Schmidt is also aware that the trial of East German citizens in a West Berlin court would increase tensions with East Germany. Soviet criticism would also accompany a Berlin court trial, given Moscow's view that extension
25X1	to Berlin could trial, given hoses of the Hague and Montreal conventions, which require local authorities either to prosecute or extradite hijackers, represents an impermissible exercise of West German sovereignty over West Berlin.// //The French and British, like the West Germans, would like to see a strict sentence imposed by a specially convened US court, which in their opinion has at least concurrent jurisdiction over air traffic in its sector. With the exception
25X1	BOLIVIA: Pereda's Election Game The issue of rescheduling a presidential election continues to dominate the political scene in Bolivia as opposition parties try to force President Pereda's hand.
25X1	All major political parties have rejected Pereda's earlier offer to hold an election in January 1980. They are demanding instead that he set a firm date for an election early next year and that he initiate major electoral reforms. So far,

L	CZECHOSLOVAKIA: Emigration
	Some Czechoslovak dissidents, in reaction to the unabating pressure of police surveillance and other harassment, are thinking of leaving the country.
	A signatory of the dissident Charter 77 manifesto has told the US Embassy that 30 to 50 people associated with the Chartist movement may soon seek to leave Czechoslovakia. Among these are Charter spokesperson Marta Kubisova and her husband, who are considering immigration to the US. Kubisova indicated several months ago that she will be stepping down as spokesperson this autumn.
	The Czechoslovak authorities offered in early 1977 to let dissidents emigrate and will probably continue this policy as a means of draining the strength of the movement. Few dissidents, however, have taken the option and, in any event, the departure of even as many as 50 signatories little involved in dissident activism total and probably as the departure of even as many as 50 signatories little
