1. [REDACTED] NII 88 in Podlipki [REDACTED] This institute appeared to be the center of missile activity in the USSR, and was under the Ministry of Armaments. 25X1
2. [REDACTED] at Podlipki [REDACTED] In general, [REDACTED] the rocket specialists continued to do the same work as they had done at Bleicherode. Their main job [REDACTED] was to teach the Soviets how to operate the A-4. 25X1
3. In November and December 1947, a group of Germans was taken to a place near Kapustin in the desert east of Stalingrad. Among those who were taken [REDACTED] the following: Hoch, Magnus, Wolff, Groettrup, Werner Mueller, Bujak, Pehle, Viebach, Gerhard Lange, and Wohlfarth. [REDACTED] It was rumored that the Germans first fired an A-4 and then the Soviets fired one. These were [REDACTED] the first firings of the A-4 or any rocket in the USSR. The tests were successful. 25X1

New Rocket Designs at Gorodomlya

7. At Gorodomlya [redacted] three projects for the development of new rockets [redacted] were:

a. The G-1 was named after Helmut Groettrup, who had developed it. This rocket was to have a range of 600 km. This range was to be attained by doing away with (1) the Zelle, or outer coating, and (2) the Verdampferanlage, or evaporation chamber, and letting the fuel tanks also be the outer coating. The size was also to be increased. This project was also known as the R-1. [redacted] it was decided that it was workable but not economical.

b. The Skizzer Project of the "G 10" (also known as the "R 10", [redacted] was to have a range of 3000 km. It was to be powered by several successive explosions instead of a single one. It was a Soviet idea and [redacted] not [redacted] taken seriously by anyone.
