Senator Harry F. Byrd has written to us concerning your interest in future employment with the Central Intelligence Agency.

In preparing for a career in intelligence work, there are so many fields of specialization open to college graduates who are outstanding students that we would hesitate to counsel you in the pursuit of one degree as against another. For example, we usually have openings for economists, geographers, mathematicians, engineers and scientists, accountants, almost any discipline you could mention. We do emphasize, however, the importance of foreign languages and you might keep this in mind.

Generally, our career opportunities are open to college graduates in any field of study provided their academic records are of a high order. The attributes of successful candidates for employment with the Central Intelligence Agency are those of the young man or woman who would equally be successful in business, industry, or the professions. In addition, however, they must be willing to serve their country without public recognition because of the very nature of the intelligence career itself.

Your interest is appreciated. A brochure describing our general employment requirements and opportunities is enclosed for your information.

Sincerely,

1653

E. D. Mohr
Director of Personnel
