Director's Meeting

Monday, 3 December 1951

The DCI noted an unevaluated report [Redacted] to the effect that an attempt would be made to assassinate Ambassador [Redacted]

Mr. Dulles reported that arrangements had been completed for the employment of [Redacted] by CIA. Mr. Dulles had talked with [Redacted] who agreed solely on the grounds of National need, since he regarded [Redacted] as his most valuable assistant. The DCI commented that CIA would do well to keep [Redacted] who could be used in a number of places.

Mr. Dulles reported on his conversation with [Redacted] respecting the coordination of atomic energy matters [Redacted]. The DCI directed that if any further matters arose in this connection, [Redacted] or any others should be instructed to discuss it with the DCI, who was personally familiar with the entire matter. The DCI thought the real question was whether the job was being done adequately and he planned to discuss this both with Gen. Bolling and with representatives of the AEC. If it was felt, after such discussions, that the present system of coordination should be changed, the DCI planned to borrow someone from the AEC and have him detailed to CIA. This would disassociate the question of coordination from a tempest in a teapot raised with respect to sending [Redacted]

Mr. Wisner handed to the DCI a draft of a memorandum outlining what might be said to [Redacted]

25X1

The DCI noted that Mr. Lovett was now back in Washington and that the move [Redacted] was imminent. The DCI planned to see Mr. Lovett on this matter tomorrow.
