Dear Mr. Carver:

Few discussions on international issues in our various seminars and conferences have been as effective and helpful as the session on Vietnam last week.

The participants appreciated the opportunity to explore this complex subject with realism and candor. More importantly, they felt greatly encouraged by the quality of talent obviously at work in this difficult area.

As some of the men later remarked, they only wished that a larger public could somehow be made to share their own sense of reassurance and confidence in this country's actions.

We deeply appreciate this valuable contribution to our program.

With best regards,

Sincerely,

Peter Malof
