HEMORANDUM FOR THE RECORD

25X1

25X1

SUBJECT: Conversation at Lunchson Wednesday, 23 January 1932

PRESENT: Park Armstrong, Special Assistant for Intelligence to the Secretary of State, Fisher Home, Deputy to

Mr. Arastrong, James Reber, AD/IC, and Loftus Benier, 12/1

The purpose of this informal discussion was to obtlist a number of points which might be the subject of further dist use one elarification and ultimately resolution as between the State Is well-gence Organization and CIA. It was recognized that all discussions were of a preliminary nature.

The first issue reised was with respect to the intermedia of highly sensitive material as between the State Intelligence ini and Cla. Mr. Armstrong reject the following points and Mr. Betlin commented thereon as indicated belows

2. Hr. Armstrong expressed satisfaction at receiving the so-called and stated that there are happy to receive anything comparable thereto which dame to CIA Mr. Beeker indicated that although such matters would have to in considered on an ad hoc basis, he had no doubt that we would be able to satisfy State's desires in that respect. If there had been any failure in this respect in the past, it was possibly to the fact that there was no single official in which all of Intelligence information was centered, as it now is in III/ (over then the Director, who was too busy to act as a disseminator of Intelligence details), but that this situation should definite;

be improved. Mr. Becker stated that, so far as he was aware, the Intelligence offices individually recognized the need for such information on the part of State. We would be glad to facility to a flow of intelligence for which State had a legitimate "need to know." This, he believed, was in complete accordance with the MI own views. It was the DCI himself who had undertaken to distribute

- 3. There was a brief discussion of the handling of sensitive raw items, such as S/S cables. It was felt generally that although there would still be occasions—on the one hand, to urge the State operating offices to be senswhat more liberal is transmitting such material to CIA, and on the other, to insure that CIA handled such material with due regard for its sensitivity—this situation was well under control.
- i. Mr. Armstrong also pointed cut the value to his organization of operational information which, strictly speaking, within the jurisdiction of DD/P. Mr. Becker indicated that all lough such matters would have to be determined in the final analysis by Mr. Wisner, he would be alert to identify Intelligence material for which Mr. Armstrong's office had a "need to know," and to act all a friendly advocate with Mr. Wisner on Mr. Armstrong's behalf, just as Mr. Armstrong was doing with respect to the Operating Office; of State, for the benefit of the CIA Intelligence Office;
- 5. Mr. Arestrong then raised the question of a recent One Intelligence Memorandum respecting Iran. As regards this memorandum, ir. Armstrong expressed the view that it was almost completely political intelligence (which was the agreed proving of State) and that it preceded by a short time a coordinated It is and, indeed, differed rather substantially from what now appear in to be the coordinated intelligence view as expressed in said it i. Mr. Becker stated that so far as he was avere, this particular Intelligence Memorandum had only been disseminated outsite the CIA to the President and to State. The memorandum had been git an to the President by direction of the DCI and any question as to that dissemination would have to be raised by the Secretary with the Director. Mr. Becker had directed that no other dissemination be made outside CIA, but CHE had reported that due to preexisting arrangements insevertent dissemination had been made to state and Mr. Backer thought that this could only be helpful and approved it after the fact. Mr. Booker further indicated that the boundaries of political intelligence were somewhat vague and it would be impossible to draw any hard and fast line. Mevertheless, he assepted entirely the principle that, so for as possible, an attempt should be made to coordinate important intelligence mesomenda as well as estimates. In this respect, obviously he operated under the Director's orders.

- 6. Mr. Armstrong thun turned to the possibility of coordinating "Current Intelligence" by which he intended to include all. Intelligence Mesorenda or communica other than rew intelligence information, on the one side, and NIEs and NEs, on the other. Both extremes seemed to be fairly well under control, but there was a surface lack of coordination with respect to this intermediate autotial. It is: resognized by all parties that this parties of the discussion, in pertionier, was on an extremely tentetive basis. During the course of this discussion it was agreed that there were time limitations on the production of Current Intelligence which, in certain instantes, at the preclude coordination. Mr. Besieer further pointed out that aside from time limitations, one essential to the condination of Jurger, Intelligence as thus defined would be a resognition on the part of working level personnel in all departments and agencies that other departments and agmeios were competent within blade fields of specialisation. This did not mean that there sould not be inquiry as to the basis for a particular fact or exclusion, but that the value of coordination would have to be recognized by all and a healthy respect given to the view and ideas of those in other agenties. a had been particularly impresend that this was the principle upon which the IAC iteals operated, and very substantial progress had been rate by that body. It would be his objective in $1.4 to instill a similar point of view in all of the working level provide and he realt that each of the other intelligence agencies would have to make a singler effort. It was agreed that this subject could well be a topic for further discussion and exploration.
- 7. Polloging the lunchess, there was a brief intershang of views on the different ways in which State and CIA handled special intelligence. State proceeded on the theory of separation, therese citalligence. State proceeded on the theory of separation, there intelligence, it. Armstrong indicated that he was having a study made of this subject by Mr. Polysedder and that he hoped that this study would be an objective review of the situation, covering both substantive and security implications. Ir. Backer expressed great interest in seeing this study. Mr. Armstrong also inquired whether the Charter of the Brownell Committee was broad enough to cover this subject and ir. Becker replied that although technically the Charter of the Countities was not broad enough to cover the situation, he would be most disinclined to raise any jurisdistional objection to having the Committee consider any subject which even reactely bore upon the matter it was engaged in studying. He felt that the work upon which the Committee was engaged was one of the most important development; now under way and regarded it as most important that every relevant aspect be considered, since that would be essential to real acceptance of the Committee's Report by all conserned.

It was the general consensus of the group that the meeting had been most helpful and that an attempt would be made to have future meetings at relatively regular intervals.
