- Sibiu has been a district capitol since 1954, about the time that Sibiu province was abolished and the city transferred to the Stalin province. It has some 120,000 residents (as compared with 50,000 before World War II) of whom a large number are Germans and Hungarians. This growth is attributed to industrial development and the migration of farmers from the surrounding villages to the town because they oppose collectivization and cannot make a living outside the kolhozes. ~~TE~~
