SUBJECT: Minutes of the 10 March 1977 OTR Staff Meeting

4. Concerning communications within the Directorate, the group felt that the word travels pretty well up and down the line with various mechanisms--staff meetings, conferences, etc.--facilitating it. They identified the problem of indistinct requests which come down and result in over-reporting and off-target reporting; this is compounded by the apparent reluctance of the Deputy Directors to go back for clarification of such requests. The group also questioned the utility of the MAG's. On the subject of creativity and controls, the group was split as to whether there was more creativity in existence in the Agency today than five years ago. They did agree, however, that there was a decreased "excitement" in working for the Agency today. Chief, [REDACTED] added that some people at the conference believed that the wrong people were being sent to certain courses. The problem of inability to get the right people into the prestige courses which are over-subscribed was also discussed.
