MEMORANDUM FOR: Director of Central Intelligence
FROM : Presidential Briefing Coordinator
SUBJECT : Preparations for Future Presidential Briefings and Meetings with Cabinet Officers

1. This memorandum discusses plans for future Presidential Briefings and also discusses your meetings with Secretary Vance. Two other packages are being sent forward separately, one with material for the 12 September briefing and one with material for later briefings. [redacted] 25X1A will schedule their submission to you to meet your travel requirements.

2. Attached is my latest status report on briefing topics.

a. Please skim it and tell me if you object to any decisions I have made, particularly with respect to dropping topics or holding them in abeyance.

b. The topic Cuban Relations with the Nonaligned Nations is listed as a nomination because of a comment you made on the 15 August NSC Meeting. It seemed to imply that the President believed that pressure from the nonaligned nations was causing Castro to pull in his horns. The gist of my talk with NIO/LA is that Castro does not feel significant pressure and indeed he may well be more aggressive in the future. Should you plan to discuss this with the President? If so, one probably would also want to ask if there were any [redacted] 25X1A [redacted] which might have given the appearance of greater pressure on Castro than was in fact the case.

Conf NAM reports as well as LA need to weigh in

c. The topic Soviet & Western European Views of Strategic Attack Forces in Western Europe also is listed as a nomination because of the 15 August NSC Meeting. In two NSC meetings, the one on DoD Fiscal Guidance and this one, the question of Soviet (and Western European?) reactions to GLCMs or MRBMs in Western Europe has come up. I don't have a feel for the importance of the topic and my general impression from talking to analysts is that the answer is, "Western Europeans would support such moves if the ground work was properly laid and the Soviets would complain bitterly, but would not do anything much different than what they are now doing." However, we are not doing any research on this topic specifically. Should we be doing research and if so should we prepare a Presidential Briefing? 25X1

Yes, though I suspect you've covered what will be said right in this [redacted]

3. You have not met with Secretary Vance for sometime. I recommend that you consider making a vigorous effort to meet with him regularly.

a. Pros. The broad Presidential Briefings on political issues which we are preparing are appropriate for Secretary Vance too. His role places him more in jeopardy of losing the forest for the trees than almost any other Cabinet officer. Therefore, treating a broad political issue from a different (DCI vice State) perspective weekly or bi-weekly should be helpful to him. Also, you could profit from getting his perspective on international issues or policy matters.

b. Cons. Both of your schedules are filled to overflowing already and inevitably your schedule will have to be perturbed to fit into Vance's rather than vice versa. Therefore, the value of regular meetings may not justify the cost to your ability to handle your other responsibilities. Behind pros
No - Vance Mts are #2 priority - keep trying

4. The following matters concern Presidential Briefing preparations more generally.

a. I still owe you a proposal for a briefing in which you and 1-2 others discuss a broad issue in a "give-and-take" mode to see if the chemistry of such a briefing would work. The current topics that seem best suited for this are African Trends, Western Sahara and Persian Gulf. I will work up a specific proposal while you are gone next week. Ballo piece

b. I think that the monthly Around-the-Table with the NIOs is working out. It is well received by other attendees. But I recommend making these sessions more open-ended. With your permission, I will ask Barbara to keep the half hour after this monthly session open so that you can either cut off the meeting after the hour scheduled for it or can feel free to return to some subject for deeper exploration.

I prefer cs to ds!

c. For your information, I am not happy with the other NIO meetings. I have been unable to focus them so that they really support your briefing preparations. At the same time, some other participants don't seem to be learning from them. I do not have a good alternative, but am trying to develop one.

d. More formal feedback to analysts preparing briefings would help. Briefings evince less enthusiasm than papers in part because the analyst's reward structure centers on having a piece of paper that his seniors and promotion boards can see. Therefore, I would like to send the principal analysts who prepare a briefing a memorandum like the one attached. Doing this will involve me paraphrasing pieces of your memorandum for the record. The risk here is that, although I will strive mightily to avoid it, I may include something that you would prefer not go to the analyst.

Also encourage publication of the better² -

No-go - must do it

5. I trust that the very informal arrangement Jay and I have worked out in which he usually handles NSC/SCC/PRC meeting preparations, and your meetings with Dr. Brzezinski and I handle Presidential Briefings, formal NSC briefings and Cabinet Officers meetings (except when one of us needs to pinch hit for the other) is acceptable. The process is still messy, but I think it will get less disorderly as it evolves.

File & it's working great
