5. The Director read his brief opening statement, the thrust of which was that the Administration would not oppose the release of a single figure comprising the national foreign intelligence program budget. However, the Administration remained adamantly opposed to any further public breakdown of the budget. Questions to the witnesses included the effect of information already leaked on the intelligence budget, the extent of Soviet knowledge of the budget, the differences between releasing defense budget figures and intelligence budget figures, and on the constitutionality of not revealing the intelligence budget.
