when the children were still young. She had difficulties with their father about the custody of the children who finally remained with her. During this period of difficulties the working classes sided with the princess and the workers of Schoenau where the princess lived in a castle with her children, volunteered a guard service to prevent the father from kidnapping his children. Through this experience the princess was thrown in contact with the Austrian Social Democratic Party. She appreciated the workers so much that she became a member of the Austrian Social Democratic Party herself. She made generous donations to the Party and continued to do so even after its liquidation by Chancellor Dollfuss. She presented the luxurious, historic, hunting

Resume: Dr. Adolf Kanitz-Eisenburg can be extremely useful in case information is needed about industries, the management of industries or the managers.

In the Wiener Bankvereins's law office (Rechtsbureau) he had to consider not only contracts, agreements or banking questions, but was trained as credit account manager too. Being very conscientious, very exact, careful and capable, investigating every detail, he probably knows more about industries and their owners than the owner himself.

Was several times his bank's successful representative abroad Austria in questions often difficult to resolve. His employers and superiors developed the very highest esteem for him.
