SOURCE

1. Russian border controls at the Soviet-Polish frontier at Petershagen, Grambow and up to Schwedt are not very rigid. Contrary to that practice, the Poles impose a strict control and the majority of able-bodied persons are detained and shipped to the interior of Poland to do compulsory work.
2. Russian infantry troops control the identity papers of persons crossing the frontier. Persons unable to produce employment records and identification papers were detained and assigned to compulsory labor.
