2.	Radu Budisteamu, a member of the moderate faction of the Iron Guard, maintains his criticism of the radical Legionnaires formerly led by Horia Sima and now by Miculescu Patrascu, as well as of the rightist group which is headed by Horia Comanciu who joined the National Peasant Party in 1944. Patrascu's group forms the extreme Left in the Iron Guard while Comanciu and his followers make up the extreme Eight. It is said that Patrascu pretends to sympathize with the present regime and with the Communists, but that he is really "sabotaging" them as much as possible. Patrascu's agents have allegadly penetrated Communist cells and organizations. Eudisteanu feels that Patrascu's "double game" is dangerous and will eventually result in mass reprisals against all Iron Guardists.
3.	According to Budisteams, the Rightist faction and Comanciu's activity in the National Peasant Partyans also a source of danger to the Iron Guard. The "shock troops" of the National Peasant Party are formed mainly by Comanciu's adherents who belonged to the clandestine Sumanele Negre (Black Coats). Comanciu's connection with this latter organization may also offer the Rumanian Sigurantza (secret police) the opportunity for wholesale arrests of Iron Guard Legionnaires.
4.	Propaganda and Professor P. P. Panaitescu, formerly Dean of the University of Bucharest and editor of Cuvantul both leading moderate Legionnaires representing the "center". Budisteam thinks that Constant and Panaitescu exaggerate their loyalty to the Government. Constant has persuaded his friends to join the Plowmen's Front with him.
5.	5. Prime Minister Petru Groza is said to have asked Budisteams to resume his political life and to join one of the Government parties. Budisteams, however, maintains that he is awaiting developments in the international situation before acting.
