- There are a few more than 20 Soviet MP's stationed at Pulantien (121-57, 39-24). Southwest of Pulantien, along the Pulantien Bay, there is an unknown number of Soviet soldiers; these Soviet soldiers are under the command of Brigadier General Chaliski or Tsalitski (Chinese phoneticization; [redacted] Major General Goluchik as commander of Soviet forces in Chinchou.) who has his headquarters in Chinchou (121-43, 39-05) in the former Japanese military headquarters.
- In the pasture area on the outskirts of Shahokou (121-35, 38-55) there are more than 520 6(?)-ton Soviet military trucks. There are more than 1,200 Soviet transportation troops stationed in the former Japanese recreation club just south of this pasture.
- At Haimaotun (121-39, 38-59) there are more than 2,400 Soviet artillery troops with 36 heavy truck-drawn artillery pieces (caliber unknown) and 22 76mm pack howitzers.
- There are over 600 Soviet troops stationed in the vicinity of Tianshenting (天神町) (probably in the vicinity of Dairen). These troops were recently transferred to this area from Port Arthur.
- At Shihchiakou (121-33, 38-56) there are more than 1,700 troops of a Soviet transportation corps. These troops are equipped with more than 410 vehicles of which over 350 are of large size (trucks?). In addition to these vehicles there are 36 four-wheel horse carts. These 1,700 troops are armed with either automatic rifles or tommy guns (自動裝彈槍) (carbines?).
