1. The border in the area of Kisgudi is guarded by an elaborate combination of fences, watch towers, and flares.
2. There are watchtowers about every 2 1/2 kilometers. Fences, approximately 4 meters high, extend from one tower to another and are designed to form a wide "V" with the open part of the "V" on the Russian side. At the apex of the "V" are 3 or 4 barbed wires stretching horizontally. The rest of the wires in the fence are electrically connected in such a way that the average contact will cause the explosion of rocket flares located about 2 meters away from the outside of the fence.
3. When the guards on duty in the watchtower or on patrol see the flares they spray the illuminated area with machine gun fire. The watchtowers are not equipped with floodlights.
4. The area on each side of the fence is ploughed weekly, enabling the patrols to observe fresh tracks and take necessary action in case of an escape.
