1. No coordinated plans between the Communist Parties of Belgium and The Netherlands exist for sabotaging ERP shipments received at the ports of Antwerp, Rotterdam and Amsterdam or for preventing ERP-sponsored economic recovery in the two countries.
2. The majority of the 35,000 dockworkers and longshoremen in Rotterdam is composed of members of the Dutch Labor (Socialist) Party. Many of the laborers at the port have no formal political affiliations. Several thousand of them belong to Catholic trade unions, and the rest have joined the EVC, The Netherlands' largest trade union which is Communist-penetrated but not Communist-controlled.
3. Should the Communist elements in Rotterdam attempt the sabotage of a single ship bringing ERP supplies to Holland, source believes that the non-Communist majority of the dockworkers would forcibly restrain such action.
