2. In addition to the 55 Soviet citizens listed above, the SS SMOLNY carried 15 Chinese passengers, including LU Feng, Chinese consul general at Khabarovsk, and his staff.
3. Captain P. Y. Stepanov was in command of the SS SMOLNY. Captain Bondarenko was on leave.

25X1A6a

~~CONFIDENTIAL~~ Comment. The presence of dependents among the Soviet citizens arriving on the SS SMOLNY appears to indicate a change in Soviet policy. Hitherto in 1948 dependents were being returned to the USSR in an attempt to insure against any defection on the part of Moscow-dispatched officials in China. The arrival of new officials with families and of dependents of Soviet officials already in China may be evidence that Moscow is confident that the Chinese Communists will soon conquer China, and believes that defection is less likely under a Chinese Communist regime. The large number of young men among the newly-arrived officials is possible evidence that Moscow thinks that young well-trained men are needed to "assist" the Chinese Communist regime in handling affairs in cosmopolitan centers such as Shanghai and Hanking, and to act as Moscow listening posts.)
