1. Daniel Oduber, Secretary to the governing junta of Costa Rica, received a message on 6 April 1949 from Juan Bosch, Dominican revolutionary now living in Habana, to the effect that the Caribbean revolutionaries Cruz Alonso and Rufemio Fernandez were anxious to maintain friendly relations with the Figueres government. The message also revealed that the Costa Rican representative of Bosch's Caribbean revolutionary group was still Buenaventura Sanchez.
2. Miguel Angel Ramirez, representative in Costa Rica of the Juan Rodriguez revolutionary group, dispatched a request to Major Francisco Morazan of Guatemala City on 5 April 1949 to have Juan Rodriguez transmit some unspecified funds to Ramirez.

Comment. Despite the possibility that Ramirez may be referring to a commercial deal, his background and that of Rodriguez would make a revolutionary purchase of some sort a more likely possibility. If Ramirez is the "Mr. Ram" mentioned in communications received by Adolfo Ortega Diaz (cf. [REDACTED]) it may be assumed that Ramirez and Ortega are involved together in some sort of deal. Ramirez and Ortega may then be expected to be found working in opposition to Buenaventura Sanchez to win the support and sympathy of President Figueres (plus the arms he controls) for their side. The position of Figueres and his cohorts, formerly disposed to intervene in revolutionary affairs, cannot be determined.
