1. Elektrizitätswerke at Dresden.

The Elektrizitätswerke at Wettinerplatz, Dresden, has a capacity of 75,000 KW. Its supply of coal comes partly from Czechoslovakia, and six truckloads of it arrive every fourth day.

2. Supply of Power to Gotha.

Since the destruction of the Gotha electricity works during the war, the Breitungun/Werra station has supplied Gotha with power via one 30 KV transmission line and one 50 KV line. This power is then stepped down to 6 KV. Gotha is supplied with 220/380 v.A.C., and the streetcars and part of the railroad to the Thüringer Wald are supplied with 600 v.D.C. via two mercury vapor rectifiers.

3. Gispersleben Power Station.

One Ljungström turbine at the Gispersleben power station is out of order as a result of corrosion in the blade carrier ring.

4. Buna-Werke Schkopau Power Station.

One [redacted] 22,000 KW turbine is not running because of a break in the shaft. The lack of blade carriers has made it difficult to repair the turbines.

50X1-HUM

5. Power Station at Magdeburg.

The blade discs at the power station at Magdeburg have suffered serious damage. The rotor is out of action.

6. WUMAG at Görlitz.

The WUMAG at Görlitz is attempting to manufacture turbine blades and jets. So far the output has been very small.
